HAYDN'S BOOK OF DIGNITIES

Joseph Haydn's Book of Dignities, first published in 1851, was revised for the twelfth—and, alas, the last time in 1894. By the middle of this century this book had become so scarce that many reference libraries and historians were without copies of their own.

The Book of Dignities is an invaluable source book for any student of world and particularly British Empire affairs whether political, diplomatic, ecclesiastical or military.

Hadyn himself built on Dr. Robert Beatson's Political Index which was published in 1806. Haydn's list of office holders—many of these offices have themselves now, of course, lapsed—holds much fascination and the work is of the greater value because of a generously full index and thanks to the author's practice of giving the detailed sources of his authorities.

In making Haydn's Book of Dignities more widely available again we hope not only to have reproduced a very useful reference work but an entertaining and rewarding book.

THE BOOK OF DIGNITIES

IS MOST RESPECTFULLY INSCRIBED BY

THE AUTHOR.

PREFACE.

Beatson's Political Index, on which the Book of Dignities is founded, was first published in 1786. It went through three editions, the last of which was published in 1806, and has, of course, been long out of print. It contained many lists of little practical utility, and its usefulness was also impaired by a want of systematic arrangement. Still it was, without doubt, a valuable book; and the fact of three large editions having been issued and speedily exhausted, shows that a work of this character is always appreciated.

In the year 1851 the late Joseph Haydn, well known as the compiler of the Dictionary of Dates and other similar works of reference, published a new edition of the Political Index, under the title of The Book of Dignities. In the preparation of this edition Haydn took Beatson's work as the foundation, eliminated from it such lists as he considered superfluous, re-arranged the remainder somewhat more methodically, and brought the book down to date. The general opinion appears to have been that

Haydn was rather too sweeping in his excisions, and that some of the lists omitted by him might have been retained with advantage.

Like its predecessor, the Book of Dignities in its turn was soon out of print, and has almost, if not quite, attained the rank of a "scarce" book. It seldom occurs in auctioneers' or booksellers' catalogues, and, when a stray copy comes into the market, it fetches a price as high as or higher than that at which it was originally published, although nearly forty years out of date, and consequently useless as a modern or correct guide.

Under these circumstances it seemed to me that the time had arrived when a new and revised edition of so useful a book might be published with advantage; and I can only express a hope that my opinion may be justified by the event. I have restored some of the more useful of the lists omitted by Haydn, and have added many others, so as to make the work as complete as possible.

As examples of the additional lists, I may mention the Deans, the Lord-Lieutenants, the Officers of the Heralds' College, the County Court Judges, the Queen's Counsel, the Colonial Governors and Bishops, and many of the minor orders of knighthood. Besides these, a large number of Dignities have been created since 1851, so that altogether whilst Haydn's edition contained only about four hundred lists, the present work contains over thirteen hundred. I have omitted the so-called "PEERAGE," which was very meagre and incomplete, as all information under this head can now be easily supplied from sources well known, and easily accessible; and, in order to economise space, I have greatly curtailed the introductory notes, which were frequently incorrect or obsolete. I have, however, added to each Dignity a reference to the Statutes, Orders in Council, or Letters Patent, creating or affecting it. This will enable the reader to obtain full and accurate information on the subject.

But the great feature of the present edition is the INDEX OF NAMES, which now appears for the first time, and which, I think and hope, cannot fail greatly to increase the utility of the work. It is so arranged as to give to the name of each person a list of every dignity or office held by him. I need not dwell upon the labour such a task has involved, it being nearly a repetition of the book itself, although, by the use of abbreviations, compressed into fewer pages. In compiling this Index, I was met with a formidable difficulty by reason of the different ways in which the same name was spelt, which rendered it almost impossible to adhere to the usual alphabetical or lexicographical arrangement. I was to some extent prepared for this, but I own I was surprised to find how little regard was, even down to comparatively modern times, paid to uniformity of spelling. I have endeavoured to overcome the difficulty by a plentiful use of cross-references, and would ask the reader's careful attention to the observations prefixed to the Index at pages 943–4. The preparation of this Index has greatly delayed the publication of the book. I could not even commence to arrange the names until the whole body of the work was in type; and, being actively engaged in the duties of my profession, I was only able to devote a few hours each day to the task.

It is so obvious that a work of this kind, where every line contains a name and a date, cannot be free from errors, that it seems hardly necessary to make the usual conventional apology for unavoidable mistakes. In compiling the Index, a number of small errors were brought to light, a list of which will be found at pages vii–x. I have not attempted systematically to revise the old lists throughout, as to do so would have been virtually to re-write the entire book; but where, in searching for additional names, I have had an opportunity of collating Haydn's lists with others I have done so. I may mention as instances that the judges, &c., have been collated with Foss's lists, and the orders of knighthood with those of Sir Harris Nicolas.

Had I known what lay before me when I first undertook the task of preparing this edition, I frankly confess that I should have hesitated to attempt it. I anticipated that I should finish the work in a little over six months, but it has occupied almost all my leisure time for more than four years. It has, however, been essentially a labour of love, and I can only hope that I have accomplished my task in such a manner as to merit the approbation of the public, into whose hands the book is now committed.

HORACE OCKERBY.

This last kingdom merged, like the other kingdoms of the Heptarchy, into that of England.

The Saxons, although they were divided into seven different kingdoms, yet were for the most part subject to one king alone, who was entitled Rex gentis Anglorum, or King of the English nation; those which were stronger than the rest giving the law to them in their several turns, till, in the end, they all became incorporated in the empire of the West Saxons, under Egbert. The term "Octarchy" is sometimes applied, by writers, to the Saxon kingdoms, inasmuch as Northumbria, the seventh kingdom, was at different periods divided into two kingdoms, Bernicia and Deira, ruled by separate kings. Other writers apply the term to the successive kings whose authority was acknowledged by the other princes of the Heptarchy; these they call Octarchs.

Kings, or Octarchs, of the English Saxons during the Heptarchy.

301. Fincormachus, son of Donald II.
348. Romachus, nephew; slain by his nobles.
351. Angusianus or Æneanus, cousin; fell in battle with the Pictish king, who was also slain.
354. Fethelmachus, also cousin of Romachus, defeated the Picts and mortally wounded their new king in battle; murdered by a Pictish minstrel who feigned himself a Scot, hired by Hergustus, the succeeding king of the Picts.
357. Eugenius I., son of Fincormachus; slain in battle by Maximus, the Roman general, and the confederate Picts.

With this battle ended the kingdom of the Scots, after having existed from the coronation of Fergus I., a period of 706 years; the royal family fled to Denmark.

Interregnum of 27 years.

404. Fergus II., great-grandson of Eugenius and 40th king; slain in battle with the Romans. "Some call this Fergus the first king, and suppose either that the previous kings are fabulous, or that they were only chiefs or generals of armies, having no royal authority. The controversy thus arising, I leave to be decided by the antiquaries, and must follow the received histories of Scotland."—Anderson.
420. Eugenius II. or Evenus, son.
451. Dongardus or Domangard, brother; defeated and drowned.
457. Constantine I., brother; assass. by Dugall, a noble, whose daughter he had dishonoured.

ANJOU.

IN 877, Louis the Stammerer, son and successor of Charles the Bald of France, upon his accession to that crown, bestowed many largesses on his friends. In order to reconcile the malcontents who had not shared them, Louis found it expedient to dismember great portions of his domains; and hence arose many seignories, duchies, and counties, possessed by various individuals and families. This is believed to be the origin of the Counts of Anjou.

Counts of Anjou.

Fulco (Fulke), surn. the Red. after having united the counties of Eudo and Ingelger, d. 938.

938. Fulco II. surn. the Good.

958. Geoffrey I., son; he obtained for himself and his successors the dignity of seneschal of France.

1040. Geoffery II., Martel (the Hammer), son, d. without male issue.

1060. Geoffrey III., the Bearded, and Fulco IV.; the latter imprisoned his brother, and was excommunicated by the pope; his consort, Bertrade of Montfort, was carried off by K. Philip I. of France, who married her.

1106. Geoffrey IV., released his uncle, who died soon after, leaving Anjou to his nephew. Geoffrey fell in a war with his father by a poisoned arrow, discharged at him, it is said, at the instance of Bertrade.

1100. Fulco V., son, became K. of Jerusalem, and d. 1142.

1129. Geoffrey V., Plantagenet, 3rd son, obt. Anjou from his father this year; his two elder brothers succeeded the father as kings of Jerusalem.

Geoffrey V., m. Mathilde d'Angleterre (Maud, dau. of Henry I.); he conq. Normandy, which he gave, in 1149, to his son Henry, aft. Henry II., K. of England. From this marriage of Maud of England with Geoffrey of Anjou, sprung the line of the Plantagenets of our own country, a race of fourteen kings, commencing with Henry II. in 1154, and terminating with Richard III. in 1485, a period of 331 years.

1150. Geoffrey VI., second son, d. without an heir.

1158. William, E. of Poitou, third son of Geoffrey V., d. 1164.

Anjou from this time became a possession of the kings of England. It was, however, in the reign of John, taken, together with Normandy, by Philip Augustus of France, and incorporated with that kingdom, and given, as a fief, first to

* * John, son of Louis VIII., who died early, and next to 1264. Charles, his brother, who, later, became Charles I. of Sicily, and whose descendants were called the house of Anjou.

Alfonso V., of Arragon and Naples, achieved a victory over René of Anjou in 1422. The dukedom of Anjou afterwards became nothing more than a mere title, taken by the second sons of the Kings of France. This title has long since ceased.

BRETAGNE OR BRITTANY.

This name, in the earliest ages, was common to all that tract of country situated between the mouths of the Seine and the Loire. When, however, the Bretons were obliged to abandon the Isle of Albion (England), and to take refuge in a part of Armorica in the 5th century, they gradually communicated their name as well to the inhabitants as to the province itself.

BURGUNDY.

The Kingdom of the Burgundians began in Alsace in 413, and continued for 119 years, the Franks stripping them of their dominions in 532. In the division of France among the sons of Clotaire in 561, Gontran had Orleans and Burgundy; in 638, Clovis II. had Burgundy and Neustra; and, on the death of Charles le Gros, in 888, Rodolph became king of Transjuran Burgundy. The Kingdom was soon afterwards united to that of Arles, and both passed, on the death of Rodolph III., in 1032, to Conrad the Salique, emperor of Germany. The Burgundians, who settled in Celtic Gaul, gave name to the county and duchy of Burgundy. Burgundy is now a part of France.

1479. The Duchy of Burgundy was annexed to France by Louis XI.

LORRAINE. BRABANT.

THIS country took its name from Lothaire, or Lotharius, son of the emperor of the same name, and was given to the prince as an independent dominion in 851. The kingdom eventually was divided in the 10th century into two parts. Lower Lorraine was governed by its dukes, afterwards Dukes of Brabant, until Brabant became united with Burgundy in 1429. The late province subsisted until 1766, when it was finally united to France.

NORMANDY.

The Normans, enticed by plunder, having made many descents upon France, Charles the Simple, at length wearied by their aggressions, came to an accommodation with them, and concluded the famous treaty of St. Clair upon the Epte, whereby he gave them a part of Neustra, which from their incursions had already taken the name of Normandy. Charles also gave his daughter Giselle to their chief, Rollo, in marriage, on the condition of his embracing Christianity, and giving it encouragement among his followers.

1087. Robert, surn. Courthose,* eldest son of William, became D. of Normandy on his father's death, his brother William succeeding to the crown of England; gov. until 1106; d. 1134.

* This Robert had a son, William, to whom (and not to his father) the French historians give the surname Courthose (Courtecuisse), short-thigh.

The contention between the last Duke, Robert, and his brother Henry (third son of the Conqueror, and then king of England), terminated with the battle of Tinchebray, in Lower Normandy, Sept, 28, 1106. Robert was defeated, made prisoner, and sent to England, where he died in captivity. Normandy was then annexed to England, but was re-united to the crown of France in the reign of King John.

SWITZERLAND.

This country became subject to Germany about 1032. The revolt under William Tell occurred in 1306, and Swiss independence was first declared in 1307. A series of wars ensued, but the Swiss maintained their freedom and formed themselves into a federation ultimately consisting of thirteen cantons, and known as the Helvetic Confederation. From 1648 this Confederation enjoyed tranquility except from internal dissensions; but in 1798 it was conquered by France, the Helvetic Confederation dissolved, and the Helvetian Republic, under the control of France, formed in its place. Some minor changes were subsequently made, but ultimately, in 1815, under the provisions of the treaty of Vienna, the federal form of government was definitely restored under the name of the Swiss Confederation, and the number of cantons was increased to 22. A new federal constitution was established in 1848.

POPES OF ROME.

The list in the former edition has been collated with that appended to Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, which follows Bower's History of the Popes. The dates of the earlier popes differ in various writers, and must, probably, be all considered as more or less "approximate."

Bishop Pearson gives the following dates:—

Linus, 55–67.
Anacletus, 67–69.
Clement, 69–83.
Evaristus, 83–91.
Alexander, 91–101.
Sixtus, or Xystus, 101–111.
Telesphorus, 111–122.
Hyginus, 122–126.
Pius, 127–142.
Anicetus, 142–161.
Soter, 161–170.

Dodwell says Anicetus d. 153, and Soter in 162.

St. Peter is given in the following list as the first Bishop of Rome. in accordance with the popular tradition; but the better opinion seems to be that the Church of Rome was really settled by St. Peter and St. Paul jointly, and that Linus was appointed the first Bishop by their joint authority. See the notes to Mosheim's List, which contain much useful information on the subject.

The temporal sovereignty of the popes nominally commenced about 720, in the papacy of Gregory III.; but it was not until 754, in the papacy of Stephen II., that it can be said to have had any real foundation. It continued with frequent additions and reductions of territory and with some intervals of conquest by foreign powers till 1859–60, when the greater part of the papal dominions was swept away and soon afterwards incorporated in the new kingdom of Italy. The then Pope, Pius IX, was maintained in Rome under the protection of a French garrison until 1870, when the garrison was withdrawn, the troops of the King of Italy entered the city, and on September 21, 1870, the temporal power of the popes came to an end.

ROME. ANCIENT ITALY. WESTERN EMPIRE. EASTERN EMPIRE. LOMBARDS.

Rome was first governed by kings, who ruled for a period of 243 years. It afterwards became a commonwealth, which existed under consuls 479 years. The Roman empire commonly dates from 31 B.C., the year in which was fought the battle of Actium, which gave to Augustus (the title afterwards conferred by the senate upon Octavius Cæsar) the supreme power.

ROME.

Kings of Rome.

Before Christ.

753. Romulus, murdered by the senators.
Tatius, K. of the Cures, removed to Rome in 747, and ruled jointly with Romulus six years.
716. Interregnum.
715. Numa Pompilius, son-in-law of Tatius the Sabine, elected; d. at the age of 82.
672. Tullus Hostilius; murdered by his successor.
640. Ancus Martius, grandson of Numa.
616. Tarquinius Priscus, son of Demaratus, a Corinthian emigrant, chosen king.
578. Servius Tullius, a manumitted slave, m. the king's dau., and succ. by the united suffrages of the army and the people.
534. Tarquinius Superbus, grandson of Tarquinius Priscus; assass. his father-in-law, and usurps the throne.
510. The rape of Lucretia, by Sextus, son of Tarquin, leads to the abolition of royalty, and the establishment of a Republic.

ROMAN REPUBLIC.

FIRST PERIOD.—From the expulsion of Tarquin to the dictatorship of Sulla or Sylla 510 to 82 B.C.

SECOND PERIOD.—From Sylla to Augustus 82 to 31 B.C. During the Republic the chief magistrates were the CONSULS, who were elected annually. Their powers being limited, DICTATORS were occasionally appointed to meet emergencies which required an absolute ruler. A dictatorship could not be lawfully held longer than six months, and this rule appears to have been adhered to except in the instances of Sylla and Julius Cæsar. During a dictatorship the Consuls remained in office but were subordinated to the Dictator.

Consuls continued to be elected after the establishment of the Empire, but they then became of comparatively minor importance, the supreme power being exercised by the Emperors.

It will be seen that during the Republic, the supreme government was occasionally placed in the hands of CONSULAR TRIBUNES, DECEMVIRS, and TRIUMVIRS, but these departures from the regular course of government were only temporary.

117. Adrian or Hadrian (Publius Ælius).
138. Antoninus Titus, surn. Pius.
161. Marcus Aurelius, and Lucius Verus, his son-in-law; the latter d. 169.
180. Commodus (L. Aurelius Antoninus), son; poisoned by his favourite mistress, Martia.
193. Publius Helvius Pertinax; put to death by the prætorian band.
Four emperors now start up; Didius Julianus, at Rome; Pescennius Niger, in Syria; Lucius Septimius Severus, in Pannonia; and Clodius Albinus, in Britain.
193. Lucius Septimius Severus; d. at York, in Britain, in 211; succ. by his sons.
211. M. Aurelius Caracalla, and Septimius Geta. Geta murdered the same year by his brother, who reigned alone until 217, when he was slain by his successor.
217. M. Opilius Macrinus, præfect of the guards; beheaded in a mutiny.
218. Heliogabalus (M. Aurelius Antoninus), a youth; put to death by his subjects.
222. Alexander Severus; assass. by some soldiers corrupted by Maximinus.
235. Caius Julius Verus Maximinus; assass. in his tent before the walls of Aquileia.
237. M. Antonius Gordianus, and his son; the latter having been killed in a battle with the partisans of Maximinus, the father strangled in a fit of despair, at Carthage, in his 80th year.
237. Balbinus and Pupienus; put to death.
238. Gordianus junior, grandson of the elder Gordianus, in his 16th year; assass. by the guards, at the instigation of his succ.
244. Phillip, the Arabian; assass. by his own soldiers; his son Philip was murdered, at the same time, in his mother's arms.
249. Metius Decius; he perished, with his two sons, and their army, in an engagement with the Goths.
251. Gallus Hostilius, and his son Volusianus; both slain by the soldiery.
253. Æmilianus; put to death after a reign of only 4 months.

253. Valerianus, and his son, Gallienus; the first was taken prisoner by Sapor, king of Persia, and flayed alive.

260. Gallienus reigned alone.

About this time 30 pretenders to the imperial power started up in different parts of the empire; of these, Cyriades was the first, but he was slain.

268. Claudius II. (Gallienus having been assass. by the officers of the guards) succ; d. of the plague.

270. Quintillus, his brother, elect. at Rome by the senate and troops; Aurelian by the army in Illyricum. Quintillus, despairing of success against his rival, who was marching against him, opened his veins, and bled himself to death.

270. Aurelian; assass. by his soldiers in his march against Persia, Jan. 275.

275. Interregnum of about 9 months.

MODERN ITALY.

THE Kings of ancient Italy will be found in succession to the Sovereigns of the Western Empire (ante p. 49). The Emperor Napoleon I. of France revived the title of King of Italy in 1805, but it did not long endure, and is not now recognized. The modern Kingdom of Italy dates from 1861, when Victor Emmanuel, King of Sardinia, assumed the title.

KINGS OF MODERN ITALY.

1861. Victor Emmanuel II. (Victor Emmanuel Mary Albert Eugène Ferdinand), K. of Sardinia, took the title of K. of Italy, Mch. 17.
1878. Humbert I. (Humbert Rénière Chas. Emmanuel John Mary Ferd. Eugène), son, June 9.

LUCCA.

Charlemagne having destroyed the empire of the Lombards, A.D. 774, Lucca came into the possession of the Franks, and in two centuries afterwards was annexed to Germany by Otto the Great. After many subsequent revolutions it was sold to Florence, and in a short time it obtained its complete freedom by purchase from the Emperor Charles IV., and retained it until modern times.

Napoleon having conferred Piombino upon his sister Elizabeth and her husband, Prince Bacciocchi, as an hereditary principality, the prince was chosen, in 1805, constitutional chief of the republic of Lucca. In 1806, Massa, Carrara, and Garfagorano, were united to the principality of Lucca. Finally, the congress of Vienna conferred Massa and Carrara upon the archduchess Beatrice d'Este; Piombino upon Prince Ludovisci Buoncampagni; and the Duchy of Lucca, with an annual pension of £20,000 upon—

Maria Louisa, dau. of Charles IV. of Spain, and widow of Louis, K. of Etruria; she d. March 13, 1824, and was succ. by her son 1824. Charles Louis, duke, b. Dec. 22, 1799; m. Aug. 1820, Maria Theresa, dau. of Victor Emmanuel I., K. of Sardinia. Relinquished the dukedom, Oct. 1847.

MODENA. REGGIO. FERRARA.

Albert Azon, or Azzo II. (great-grandson of Albert Azon I., who died A.D. 964), espoused Cunegunda, daughter of Guelph II., count of Altdorf and duke of Lower Bavaria, and, dying in 1097, left two sons. Of these, the elder, Guelph, inherited the states of Altdorf at the decease of his uncle, Guelph, duke of Carinthia; and from him sprang the branch of Guelph-Este. From the second son, Fulke, emanated the branch of Fulke-Este. The illustrious house of Este governed as Signori of Ferrara in the 12th century; and Modena, Reggio, and Ferrara became ducal territories, by concession, partly of the emperor and partly of the pope, in favour of Borso and Hercules d'Este, in 1452.

SAVOY. SARDINIA.

SAVOY, after various changes, was erected into a county in the beginning of the 11th century, and at the close of the 14th the governing count obtained the title of duke. The Dukes of Savoy, who acquired Sicily in 1713, exchanged it with Austria, in 1718, for Sardinia, and became kings of Sardinia. This state became involved in the great war between France and Austria, which closed with the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1748. After enjoying a long term of peace, it took part in the war of the French revolution, and in 1798 the continental territories were parcelled out into departments of the French empire, and were not restored to the legitimate sovereign until the overthrow of Napoleon in 1814. Genoa was added to Sardinia by the congress of Vienna in 1815. Savoy was ceded to France in 1860, and Sardinia became part of the new kingdom of Italy in 1861.

SICILY. NAPLES. THE TWO SICILIES.

The Greek emperors, upon the expulsion of the Ostrogoths by Belisarius in the 6th century, took possession of Lower Italy, and retained it for more than 200 years. The duchy of Benevento (Naples), however, founded by the Lombards in the same century, attained such importance and territorial extent that it possessed, within 120 years, the greater part of the country now comprising the kingdom of Naples. In the 9th century the Arabs conquered the island of Sicily, which was wrested from them in the 11th century by count Roger I., who inherited Naples from his elder brother, Robert Guiscard, by whom it had been acquired by conquest.

TUSCANY.

TUSCANY became subject to Rome in the 5th century before the Christian era, and was possessed by that empire for about 800 years. Tuscany was governed by a succession of marquesses or dukes from the 9th until the 13th century. The continual divisions by which the country was agitated led to a change in the form of government, and eventually to the ascendancy of the great family of the Medici as Grand Dukes. The ancient name, Etruria, was revived for a time in 1801.

AUSTRIA.

Austria was part of the German empire. The margraves of Austria were established by Charlemagne between 791 and 796, and were afterwards declared princes of the empire. In 1156 the margravate was made an hereditary duchy, which, in its turn, was, in 1453, raised to an archduchy. The dukes of Germany were frequently elected emperors of Germany, and at length, from 1493 to 1804, the imperial title was hereditary in the Austrian line. In 1804 the emperor Francis II. of Germany became emperor Francis I. of Austria only.

BOHEMIA.

Bohemia had formerly an elective government, but Ferdinand I. declared it hereditary in the house of Austria in 1547; and the kingdom may be said to have remained since that time in the undisturbed possession of that house. In the early part of the 17th century, the Bohemians made an attempt to shake of the imperial yoke, and offered the crown to the elector palatine Frederick, then the most powerful Protestant prince in Germany; but he was driven out of Bohemia by the emperor's generals, stripped of his other dominions, and obliged to depend on James I. of England, whose daughter Elizabeth he had married, for a scanty subsistence.

1309. Charobert or Charles Robert.
1342. Louis the Great; elect. K. of Poland in 1370.
1382. Mary, called King Mary, dau. of Louis the Great.
1392. Mary and her consort Sigismund, who became K. of Bohemia, and was elected emp. of Germany in 1410.
1437. Albert, D. of Aurtria, m. the dau. of Sigismund, and succ. to the thrones of Hungary, Bohemia, and Germany.
1440. Ladislas IV., K. of Poland, of which kingdom he was Ladislas VI.
1444. Interregnum.
1453. Ladislas V., posthumus son of Albert, under the guardianship of the great Huniades; poisoned.
1458. Matthias Corvinus, son of Huniades, the late regent.
1490. Ladislas VI., K. of Bohemia; the emp. Maximilian laid claim to both Kingdoms.
1516. Louis II. of Hungary (I. of Bohemia), killed at the battle of Mohatz.
1526. John Zapolski, elect. by the Hungarians, and supported by the sultan Solyman, and Ferdinand I., K. of Bohemia, bro. to the emp. Charles V.; rival kings.
1541. Ferdinand, alone; elect. emp. of Germany in 1558.
1561. Maximilian, son; emp. in 1564.

1687. Joseph I., son; emp. in 1705.
1711. Charles (Charles VI. of Germany), brother of Joseph, and nominal K. of Spain.
1740. Maria Theresa, dau., empress; surv. her consort, Francis I., emp., from 1765 until 1780. (See Germany.)
1780. Joseph II., son, emp. in 1765; succ. to Hungary on the death of his mother.
1790. Leopold II., brother, emp.
1792. Francis I., son, Francis II. as emp. of Germany; in 1804 he became emp. of Austria only.
1835. Ferdinand V., son; Ferdinand I. as emp. of Austria.
This Emperor would have been Ferdinand IV. of Germany, but for the change of style in 1804; abd.
1848. Francis Joseph, nephew; Dec. 2.

For the last three centuries the succession of the kings of Hungary varies little from the succession of the emperors of Germany and Austria, the crown having continued in the house of Austria.

TRANSYLVANIA.

Transylvania was a province of Austria. It was an independent principality from 1526 to 1699, when it was again united to Austria, and so remained until 1848, when it was joined to the kingdom of Hungary

GERMANY. CONFEDERATION OF THE RHINE. GERMANIC CONFEDERATION. NORTH GERMAN CONFEDERATION. SOUTH GERMAN STATES. GERMAN EMPIRE.

GERMANY.

Germany was anciently divided into several independent states. The Germans withstood the attempts of the Romans to subdue them; and although that people conquered some parts of the country, they were expelled before the close of the 3rd century. In the 5th century the might of the Huns and other nations prevailed over the greater portion of Germany; it was not, however, totally reduced until Charlemagne made himself master of the whole. This great prince took the title of emperor, entailing the dignity of his family; but after his race became extinct in 911, the empire went to the Germans, and the title was afterwards made elective. The house of Austria enjoyed the distinction almost uninterruptedly from 1438 (when one of its princes was raised to the imperial throne) until 1804. In that year Francis II. resigned the honour and office of emperor of Germany, and became emperor of Austria only; the latter title being hereditary.

Kings and Emperors of Germany.

Carlovingian Race.

800. Charlemagne.
814. Louis le Debonnaire, K. of France.
840. Lothaire, or Lother, son; d. in a monastery at Treves.
855. Louis II., son.
875. Charles II., called the Bald, K. of France; poisoned by his physician, Zedechias.
877. Interregnum.
880. Charles III., le Gros, crowned K. of Italy; dep.
887. Arnulf, or Arnoul, crowned emp. at Rome in 896.
899. Louis III., called IV., the last of the Carlovingian race in Germany.

Saxon Dynasty.

911. Otho, D. of Saxony, refused the dignity on account of his age.
911. Conrad I., D. of Franconia.
918. Henry I., surn. the Fowler, son of Otho, D. of Saxony, King.
936. Otho I., son, styled the Great. Many writers withhold the inperial title from him until crowned by pope John XII. in 962.
973. Otho II., the Bloody; so stigmatised for his cruelties; wounded by a poisoned arrow.
983. Otho III., son, surn. the Red, yet in his minority; poisoned.
1002. Henry II., D. of Bavaria, surn. the Holy, and the Lame.
1024. Conrad II., surn. the Salique.
1039. Henry III., the Black, son.
1056. Henry IV., son, a minor, under the regency of his mother Agnes; dep. by his son and successor.
1106. Henry V., m. Maud or Matilda, dau. of Henry I. of England.
1125. Lothaire II., surn. the Saxon.
1138. Interregnum.
1138. Conrad III.. D. of Franconia.
1152. Frederick Barbarossa; drowned by his horse throwing him into the river Salphet, or the Cydnus.
1190. Henry VI., son, surn. Asper, or the Sharp; this emperor detained Richard I. of England a prisoner in his dominions.
1198. Philip, brother; assass. at Bamberg by Otto, of Wittelsbach.
1208. Otho IV., surn. the Superb, recognised as K. of Germany, and crowned as emp. the next year; excommunicated and deposed.
1212. Frederick II., K. of Sicily, son of Henry VI.; dep. by his subjects, who elected Henry, landgrave of Thuringia. Frederick d. 1250, naming his son Conrad his succ. but the pope gave the imperial title to William, E. of Holland.
1250. Conrad IV., son.
From the death of Frederick II. until the accession of Rodolph, in 1273, the time that elapsed may be regarded as an interregnum, Conrad IV. being opposed; one party of the electors at Frankfort chose Richard, earl of Cornwall, brother of Henry III. of England, and the other chose Alphonsus, king of Castile. The first lost the dignity, by attending the civil wars of England; and the last it by negligence; so neither is reckoned in the list of emperors.

1250. William, E. of Holland; d. Dec. 1255. The electors could not agree in the choice of a successor.

1256. Interregnum.

Houses of Hapsburg, Luxemburg, and Bavaria.

1273. Rodolph, count of Hapsburg, the first of the Austrian family.

The Hapsburg family was founded in 1026, by Radboton, grandson of Gontram, count of Brisgau, and derived its name from the castle of Hapsburg on the river Aar, in Switzerland. This was the cradle, as it were, of the house of Austria. The male line of Hapsburg became extinct in 1740, in the person of Charles VI., after giving twenty-two sovereigns to Austria, sixteen emperors to Germany, eleven kings to Hungary and Bohemia, and six to Spain.

1291. Interregnum.

1292. Adolphus, count of Nassau, to the exclusion of Albert, son of Rodolph, dep.; slain at the battle of Spires.

1298. Albert, D. of Austria, Rodolph's son; killed by his nephew at Rheinfels.

1308. Henry VII. of Luxemburg.

1313. Interregnum.

1314. Louis IV. of Bavaria, and Frederick III. of Austria, son of Albert, rival emperors; Frederick d. 1330.

1330. Louis reigns alone.

1347. Charles IV. of Luxemberg. In this reign was given at Nuremberg in 1356, the famous Golden Bull, which became the fundamental law of the German empire.

1378. Wenceslas, son, K. of Bohemia; twice imprisoned, and at length forced to resign, but continued to reign in Bohemia.

1400. Frederick III., D. of Brunswick; assass. immediately after his election, and seldom placed in the list of emperors.

1400. Rupert, count palatine of the Rhine, crowned at Cologne; d. 1410.

1410. Jossus, marq. of Moravia, chosen by a party of the electors; d. the next year.

1410. Sigismund, K. of Hungary, elected by another party. On the death of Jossus, he was recognised by all parties; K. of Bohemia in 1419.

House of Austria.

1438. Albert II., surn. the Great, D. of Austria, and K. of Hungary and Bohemia; d. Oct. 27, 1439.

1439. Interregnum.

1440. Frederick IV., surn. the Pacific; elect. emperor Feb. 2; but not crowned until June 1442.

1493. Maximilian I., son, d. 1519. Francis I. of France and Charles I. of Spain became competitors for the empire.

1519. Charles V. (I. of Spain), son of Joan of Castile and Philip of Austria, elected; res. both crowns, and retired to a monastery, where he died soon after.

1558 Ferdinand I., brother, K. of Hungary.

1564. Maximilian II., son, K. of Hungary and Bohemia.

1576. Rodolph II., son.

1612. Matthias, brother.

1619. Ferdinand II., cousin, son of the archd. Charles, K. of Hungary.

1637. Ferdinand III., son.

1658. Leopold I., son.

1705. Joseph I., son.

1711. Charles VI., brother.

1740. Maria Theresa, daughter, Q. of Hungary and Bohemia, whose right to the empire was sustained by England.

At the decease of the emp. Charles VI. in 1740, his hereditary dominions devolved of right (by the pragmatic sanction) upon his only daughter and heiress the archduchess Maria Theresa, but were claimed by the husband of his niece, (Maria Amelia, daughter of Joseph I.), Charles, elector of Bavaria, who was declared king of Bohemia in 1741, and crowned emp. of Germany at Frankfort the following year, as Charles VII. This dispute disturbed the tranquillity of Europe, and occasioned a war in which all the great European powers were involved, and which did not terminate until 3 years after the death of Charles VII., when Maria Theresa had her patrimonial dominions guaranteed to her by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1748.

1742. Charles VII., elector of Bavaria, whose claim was supported by France; rival emperor, and contested the succession. Charles d. Jan. 1745. See Maria Theresa, supra.

1745. Francis I. of Lorraine, Gr. D. of Tuscany, consort of Maria Theresa.

1765. Joseph II., son of the emp. Francis and of Maria Theresa.

1790. Leopold II., brother.

1792. Francis II., son.

This monarch surrendered the dignity of emp. of Germany on August 11, 1804, and assumed the title of emp. of Austria only. In 1806 the German princes seceded from the German empire, and placed themselves under the protection of Napoleon I. of France.

See "Confederation of the Rhine," infra.

House of Prussia.

1871. Jan. 18. The title of emp. of Germany was revived, and William I., K. of Prussia, was proclaimed emperor.

THE CONFEDERATION OF THE RHINE

was established July 12, 1806, under the auspices of Napoleon I. emp. of France, and by the Act of Confederation a number of states dissolved their connection with the German empire and allied themselves with France. Other states subsequently joined the Confederation from time to time, most of them under the coercion of Napoleon.

The following States in South Germany :—

1. Bavaria.
2. Wurtemburg.
3. Baden.
4. Hesse Darmstadt.

were allowed to remain nominally independent, but were bound by secret treaties to place their armies at the disposal of Prussia in case of war.

The following States were annexed to Prussia :—

1. Hanover.
2. Hesse-Cassel.
3. Nassau.
4. Frankfort.
5. Schleswig-Holstein.

During the Franco-German war of 1870–1, the North and South German States were united under the title of

THE GERMAN EMPIRE.

William I., K. of Prussia, was proclaimed emp. Jan. 1871, and the 1st Parliament of the empire was held at Berlin Mar. 21, 1871.

The German Empire comprises the following States :—

PRUSSIA. BRANDENBURG.

Prussia continued long under the dominion of Poland, but at length threw off the dependence of its dukes upon that power. Frederick William laid the foundation of the present monarchy, and his son and successor, in Jan. 1701, assumed the title of the king, and was acknowledged as king by the emperor Leopold and all his allies. Prussia is now the ruling German State, and its king is also emperor of Germany

BADEN. BADEN-BADEN. BADEN-DURLACH.

The house of Baden descends from Gerold, who, as well as his son, appears in the ancient records towards the close of the 8th century, as Landgraves of the Barr. From him, after many descents, came Bertholdus, who had two sons. The elder, Herman I., possessed, vitâ patris, Hochberg in Brisgau, to which Baden belonged; he took the title of margrave, and died in 1074. His heir was Herman II., who called himself "margrave of Baden," and was the head and founder of the present house of Baden, 1130.

From Christopher I., who united the branches of Hochberg and Baden, and died in 1527, proceeded the branches of Baden-Baden and Baden-Durlach, which were united in 1771. He had two sons, Bernard and Ernest, of whom below.

BRUNSWICK. HANOVER.

The house of Brunswick owes its origin to Azo IV. of the family of Esté, son of Hugo III., marquess of Ferrara, in Italy. Azo, who died in 1055, left by his consort Cunegonde, daughter and heiress of Guelph, duke of Bavaria, a son, who was great-grandfather of Henry, surnamed the Lion. (See Bavaria, p. 67.) This prince married Maud, eldest daughter of Henry II. of England, and is always looked upon as the ancestor of our persent royal family. The dominions possessed by Henry the Lion were very extensive; but he having refused to assist Frederick Barbarossa in a war against pope Alexander III., that emperor's resentment was drawn upon him, and in the diet of Wurtzburg, in 1180, he was proscribed. The duchy of Bavaria was given to Otho, count Wittelsbach, from whom is descended the present royal family of Bavaria; the duchy of Saxony was conferred upon Bernard Ascanius, founder of the house of Anhalt; and his other possessions were disposed of to different princes. Thus despoiled, Henry retired to England; but ultimately, after much intercession, Brunswick and Luneberg were restored to him. He left three sons. The two elder having no male issue, William, the third son, carried on the line of his family, and from him all the succeeding dukes of Brunswick and Luneberg have descended.

The house of Brunswick has from time to time divided into several branches. The principal are:

Brunswick-Luneburg.
Brunswick-Wolfenbuttel, 1st branch.
Brunswick-Zell, or Brunswick-Luneburg-Zell, from which the house of Hanover descended.
Brunswick-Wolfenbuttel, 2nd branch, or Brunswick-Luneburg-Wolfenbuttel.

FRANCONIA.

Pharamond is the first of the Franconian kings of whom we have any distinct mention; see France. They were conquered by Charlemagne, and Franconia was subsequently governed by dukes.

In modern times, Franconia consisted of two principalities, Bayreuth and Anspach; three bishoprics, Bamburg, Wursburg, and Eichstadt; seven counties, and three lordships. These divisions are now altered, one district having been given to Wurtemburg, another to Baden, a third to the house of Hesse, and the tract called Henneberg to the house of Saxe. All the rest has been made over to Bavaria.

1191. Conrad VII., and D. of Suabia.

HESSE.

HESSE-CASSEL, HESSE-DARMSTADT, HESSE-HOMBURG.

HESSE.

All the Hessian branches proceed from Philip the Generous, who at the death of his father, William II., in 1509, inherited the entire principality of Hesse. Dying in 1567, he left four sons, who divided the territory, so that four lines originated:—(1) Hesse-Cassel, (2) Hesse-Marburg, which lapsed in 1583, (3) Hesse-Rheinfels, which lapsed in 1604, and (4) Hesse-Darmstadt. Of the two principal branches, the eldest son, William IV., became the founder of that of Hesse-Cassel; and George, the youngest son, became the founder of the branch of Hesse-Darmstadt.

MECKLENBURG.
MECKLENBURG-SCHWERIN. MECKLENBURG-STRELITZ.

CHARLEMAGNE, during his wars with the Saxons, entered Mecklenburg, A.D. 789, and compelled the inhabitants to embrace Christianity. Louis, his successor, had the country governed by the dukes of Saxony; the people, however, threw off that yoke, and Nicolas and Premislas, princes, divided the territory between them. In 1147, Nicolas being slain in battle, Henry the Lion conquered Mecklenburg, and divided it among his generals and knights. But to the son of Nicolas (Premislas II.) he restored a part of his father's dominions, with the title of "Prince of Mecklenburg," instead of the former title, which was "King of the Wenden." After the death of Premislas II. followed Henry Borwin, his son, founder of the house of Mecklenburg. The modern division of the duchy was made at the commencement of the 18th century. The dignity of grand duke was conferred on the princes of Mecklenburg by the Congress of Vienna in 1815.

Walram III., who possessed, in 1195, all the territory belonging to Nassau, died in 1198; and his sons, Henry I. and Rupert V., reigned jointly until the latter entered into the union of the German knighthood in 1230. The sons of Henry I. (who was surnamed the Rich) were Walram and Otho. They governed in common until 1255, and became the founders of two distinct principal lines. That of Walram became possessed of the principality of Nassau, and that of Otho is represented by the Netherlands' dynasty. Walram's successor was his son, Adolphus, elected emp. in 1292; fell in battle with Albert of Austria, at Gellheim (Spires), in 1298.

1298. Gerlach, son, reigned until 1361. This prince's two sons, Adolphus II. and John I., divided Walram's line again into two branches, Nassau-Idstein-Weisbaden and Nassau-Weilburg; the latter created by John I., the former by Adolphus.

Little is known of Saxony until Charlemagne directed his arms to the right bank of the Rhine. He experienced much resistance from the Saxons under Wittikind, but they, in the end, submitted to him; and among the consequences of their subjection to this great conqueror, was the conversion of the country to Christianity. He conferred the title of duke upon their chief. The first who became elector was Bernard III. of the House of Ascania, and, on the extinction of that line, Frederick the Warlike, margrave of Misnia or Meissen was made elector. Saxony continued an electorate until 1806, when the title of elector was changed to king, conformably with the treaty of peace between France and Frederick Augustus, signed at Posen, Dec. 11, in that year.

HOLLAND. THE NETHERLANDS. BELGIUM. PRINCES OF ORANGE.

About the 10th century, Holland and other provinces were governed by their own counts or dukes. The Netherlands subsequently fell to Burgundy, next to Austria; and the emperor Charles V. annexed them to Spain. The tyranny of Philip II. and the barbarities of the duke of Alva exasperated the people, and under the conduct of William, prince of Orange, was formed the famous League of Utrecht, which proved the foundation of the Republic of the Seven United Provinces. The Netherlands were conquered by Napoleon I. and annexed to France, but recovered their independence and became a kingdom in 1815; the southern part, Belgium, separated from it, and became a kingdom in 1830–1.

Portugal submitted to the Roman arms about 250 B.C., and underwent the same changes as Spain on the fall of the Roman empire. Conquered by the Moors A.D. 713. They kept possession till they were vanquished by Alfonso VI., the Valiant, of Castile, assisted by many other princes and volunteers. Among those who shone most in this expedition was Henry of Burgundy, grandson of Robert, king of France. Alfonso bestowed upon him Theresa, his natural daughter, and, as her marriage portion, the kingdom of Portugal, which he was to hold of him. Portugal fell under the Spanish yoke in 1580, but shook it off in 1640, since which time the Braganza family has reigned.

RUSSIA.

Russia was peopled by numerous tribes who were comprehended in the general name of Scythians. Rurick was great duke in the 9th century; and Vladimir or Waldimir, called the Apostle and the Solomon of Russia, was the first Christian sovereign in the 10th. His marriage with Ann, sister of the Eastern emperors Basil and Constantine, led to the adoption of the doctrines of the Greek Church in his dominions. The history of Russia previous to the last three or four centuries is involved in much obscurity, and it does not appear that any of the states existing in this vast tract of country were considerable, or that the events connected with them differed much from those of other barbarous nations.

POLAND.

The Poles were originally a tribe of Sclavonians, settled on the banks of the Danube, but they removed at an early period to the Vistula, where they became intermingled with the Goths. Their early history is very obscure, and is known chiefly from the accounts of writers of other nations. The country was for a long time governed by elective chiefs bearing the title of duke, no dynasty having been established before the sway of Piastus (842) whose family ruled for several centuries. The Crown became afterwards strictly elective by a Diet, or assembly of the nobles, who chose from among themselves a king, upon every vacancy occasioned on the throne by death. Since the dismemberment of Poland, each portion has been under the sovereignty of the power by which it was seized.

SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

The internal state of Sweden is little known previously to the 11th century. By the union of Calmar, in 1394, Sweden became a mere province of Denmark, and was not rescued from this subjection until 1521, when Gustavus Vasa recovered the kingdom from the Danish yoke. For this he was raised to the throne in 1523, and the crown made hereditary in his descendants, who reigned until 1809. In this year, Gustavus IV., having brought the nation to the verge of ruin by his misgovernment, was deposed, and the duke of Sudermania became king. The next year Bernadotte was elected successor to the throne, which he ascended in 1818.

NORWAY, which had belonged to Denmark from 1397, was ceded to Sweden by the treaty of Kiel, signed January 14, 1814, and confirmed by the Diet, October 14, same year.

KINGS OF SWEDEN.

Many antiquaries trace the reigns of the kings of Sweden as early as from the 5th century, and place Swartman as sovereign in 481, A.D. But the authorities so differ in the early successions, that the present list is made to commence with the 11th century.

DENMARK.

The name Denmark is supposed to be derived from Dan, a founder of the Danish monarchy, and mark, a German word signifying country, i.e. Dan-mark, the country of Dan. The people, however, were but little known in history until they began to made inroads into Germany and to commit piracies in the northern seas under various designations, as Norwegians or Northmen, Swedes, Frizans, Jutes, or Scuyths, or Danes. Norway was possessed by Denmark from the reign of the celebrated Margaret, "the Semiramis of the North," in the 15th century, until 1814, when it was united, as an integral state, to the sovereignty of Sweden.

GREECE.

This country anciently consisted of the peninsula of the Peloponnesus, Greece outside the Peloponnesus, Thessaly, and the islands; the limits of modern Greece are much more confined. It became subject to the Turkish empire in the 15th century, and has but recently again become a separate state. The treaty of London, on behalf of Greece, between England, France, and Russia, was signed in Oct. 1827; count Capo d'Istria was declared president in Jan. 1828, and assassinated 9th Oct., 1831. The Porte acknowledged the independence of Greece in April, 1830. It was afterwards erected into a kingdom, of which Otho I. of Bavaria was made king.

IONIAN ISLANDS.

The Ionian Islands are now united to Greece. For a list of the English Lord High Commissioners appointed prior to the union see Part II. "Diplomatic."

SOVEREIGNS AND RULERS OF ASIA.

JERUSALEM.

This kingdom began with its capture by the first crusaders, who elected as king, in 1099, Godfrey de Bouillon, the chief commander of the expedition, though he chose to be called, from motives of piety, the "advocate or defender of the holy sepulchre." The crown of Jerusalem descended from Godfrey de Bouillon to the house of Anjou, afterwards to Guy de Lusignan, and, in 1210, to John de Brienne. The emperor

Frederick having married the daughter of this last, was invested with all her rights, which, however, he did not care to assert; and the possession of Jerusalem being no longer an object of ambition the city became, what it had been before Godfrey's invasion, a place of pilgrimage.

OTTOMAN OR TURKISH EMPIRE.

The Turks are of Tartar descent. There is a rapid river called Turk, running into the Caspian Sea, from which some suppose this people to take their name. About the year A.D. 800 they obtained possession of a part of Armenia, called from them Turcomania; and they afterwards gradually extended their power. Their dominions, divided for some time into petty states, were united under Othman, from whom his subjects obtained the name of Ottomans. He established his empire Prusa, in Bithynia, in the year 1299, and his successors extended their conquests over the adjacent parts of Asia, Africa, and Europe. In 1453 Constantinople was taken by Mahomed II., which put an end to the Eastern Empire.

EGYPT.

This country is still nominally under the suzerainty of Turkey, who conquered it in 1517. It was then governed by Beys till about 1799, when the French took possession and remained till expelled by the English in 1801, when the Turkish government was restored. Shortly afterwards Mehemet Ali was appointed pacha, and he from time to time rebelled against the sovereignty of Turkey with a view to establishing Egyptian independence. These struggles terminated in 1841 by the Pachalic or Viceroyalty of Egypt being made hereditary in Mehemet Ali's family.

PERSIA.

At the partition of the dominions of Alexander the Great among his captains, Persia was annexed to the Syrian kingdom of Seleucus Nicator, but did not continue long so, for in the reign of Antiochus Theos, Arsases vindicated the independence of his country, and founded the monarchy of the Parthians. In the 3rd century of the Christian era a great internal convulsion took place, which terminated in the accession of the dynasty of the Sassanides, who restored the name, with the religion and laws of Ancient Persia. This government was overthrown by the Saracens; and the successive invasions by the descendants of Zingis or Zenghis Khan, Timur, and by the Turks, changed entirely the aspect of Western Asia. Persia was the main theatre on which the Saracens contended for mastery with these invaders, and she suffered all the miseries to which a nation can be exposed from the devastation of barbarous and sanguinary hordes. At length, early in the 16th century, a new dynasty arose.

HAYTI. ST. DOMINGO. DOMINICAN REPUBLIC.

This island (whose Indian name of Hayti was changed by the Spaniards to Hispaniola and afterwards to St. Domingo) was a Spanish colony from Dec. 1492 to 1630. It was then seized by French freebooters, and ultimately taken possession of by the French Government in 1697. The native negroes revolted against the French in Aug. 1791, and massacred the whites in June 1793. The French Directory recognised the insurgent general, Toussaint L'Ouverture, as general of the army in 1794, and he declared the island independent of France, and granted a separate constitution, May 9, 1801. He was afterwards defeated by the French, by whom he was made prisoner, May 7, 1802, and died in France 1803. Soon after his defeat there was a fresh insurrection by the negroes under Dessalines, and eventually the island was evacuated by the French in Nov. 1803. Dessalines then became emp. as James I., Oct. 8, 1804, but was assassinated, Oct. 17, 1806. The island was then divided, the negroes forming a kingdom in the north under the name of Hayti, and the mulattoes forming a republic in the south under the name of St. Domingo. In Nov. 1820 these two divisions were re-united and formed into a free state under the presidency of Boyer, who was named Regent for life, and the independence of the Republic was recognised by France, April 17, 1825. In 1843 another revolution occurred, which resulted in the deposition and the secession of St. Domingo and the eastern part of Hayti, who formed themselves into a separate state under the title of the Dominican Republic. Hayti has since maintained a separate existence, sometimes as an empire and sometimes a republic.

The Dominican Republic was re-united to Spain by declaration of March 18, 1861, accepted by the Queen of Spain on May 20 following; but it again revolted in 1863, and was finally renounced by Spain, May 5, 1865. Since that time it has continued a republic.

The republic of the Venetian States was wholly overthrown in 1797. The emperor of Germany took possession of these dominions in that year; it being settled by a private article in the treaty of Campo Formio, that he accepted them in compensation for the Netherlands.

TO GERMANY AND AUSTRIA.

THE various states constituting geographical Germany have been from time to time united in various combinations for diplomatic purposes. Hence there is some difficulty in arranging the ambassadors under each separate state. Where an ambassador is accredited to one state where it was the custom to have a separate diplomatic representative, he will be found under that state, but where he is accredited to several states or to one of the confederations of German states, or was sent, as an exception, to one particular state generally associated with others, he should be searched for under the heading "German States and Confederations."

The name of each separate state mentioned in the credentials will be found both in the Table of Contents and in the Index.

TO THE IONIAN ISLANDS.

Corfu, Cephalonia, Zante, St. Maura, Ithaca, Cerigo, and Paxo.

These islands, called the "Republic of the Seven Islands," were placed under the protection of Great Britain, by the congress of Vienna, in 1815, and "Lord High Commissioners" were from time to time appointed and sent out. A list of these is given here, in the absence of any more appropriate place, although their functions differed considerably from those of ordinary diplomatic representatives.

PART III. POLITICAL AND OFFICIAL.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS, OFFICERS OF STATE, OFFICERS OF THE HOUSEHOLD, &c.

THE ADMINISTRATIONS OF ENGLAND, GREAT BRITAIN, AND THE UNITED KINGDOM.

The higher officers of the Government, holding their offices during the sovereign's pleasure, and removable on political change, are collectively called "the Administration," and are almost invariably members of one or other house of parliament. A select number of these, filling the most important offices, who assemble to concert on and conduct the measures of the Government, are now called the Cabinet, a name not known to the constitution, but which is, in fact, a committee of the privy council, who constitute the responsible advisers of the Crown. The following lists are confined to cabinet ministers, or to those who in former times exercised analogous powers.

KING CHARLES II.

From the Restoration of the King.

Until this time there was not, in point of fact, anything that could be properly called a CABINET. The sovereign had latterly governed by a collection of privy councillors, sometimes of larger, sometimes of smaller number, not always holding the same offices, and still less the same men.

1660. Sir Edwd. Hyde, aft. E. of Clarendon, ld. chanc.; Geo. Monk, general of the king's forces in the three kingdoms, and m. horse, cr. D. of Albemarle; Thos., E. of Southampton, soon made ld. treas.; Edwd. Montagu, cr. LORD TREASURERS. LORD HIGH TREASURERS. LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF THE TREASURY.

THE lord treasurership, though not highest in nominal rank, has generally been the highest political office in the state. For many years past the office has been executed by commissioners known as lords of the treasury. The first lord is almost invariably the head of the government, and the second lord is, generally, also the chancellor of the exchequer.

SECRETARIES AND UNDER SECRETARIES TO THE TREASURY.

THE time of the first appointment of a secretary to the Treasury Board is uncertain; but it is presumed there must always have been a secretary or some officer acting in that capacity to the lord treasurer, or the board. It is probable that Lord Burleigh was the first treasurer who used a secretary to notify his directions to the officers of the receipt side of the exchequer. Sir George Downing was secretary in May 1667. In the reign of James II., when the earl of Rochester was treasurer, he had two secretaries, Henry Guy and Francis Gwyn, as is stated in a subsequent Treasury Minute Book (year 1711). In the Treasury Minute Book, 1695, No. 6, page 12, is the following memorandum:

"This evening the king was graciously pleased to bestow on me the place of Secretary to the Treasury." "WILLIAM LOWNDES."

Fron this it would appear that there was only one secretary in 1695, as Mr. Lowndes distinctly states the place of secretary to have been bestowed upon him. It is quite certain there were two secretaries in 1714.

Both the secretaries to the Treasury are political officers who go out of office with their party. One is termed the "parliamentary" or "patronage" secretary, and generally acts as the principal government "whip" in the House of Commons. The other is termed the "financial" secretary, and attends to what is, really, Treasury business.

Besides the two political secretaries there is a permanent official formerly called the "assistant," but now called the "permanent" secretary.

COMPTROLLERS-GENERAL OF THE EXCHEQUER AND AUDITORS-GENERAL OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

On the abolition of the offices of auditor and tellers of the exchequer, and clerk of the pells, as from October 11, 1834, under 4 & 5 Will IV., cap. 15, the office of Comptroller-General of the Exchequer was created, to perform the functions of the suppressed departments. As far back as 1785 commissioners were appointed to audit the public accounts, and numerous acts were passed defining their duties. By 28 & 29 Vict., cap. 23 (July 5, 1855), it was provided that on the next vacancy in the office of comptroller-general of the exchequer the duties were to be performed by the chairman for the time being of the audit commissioners. On July 5, 1865, lord Monteagle, the then comptroller, surrendered his office, and on July 25, 1865, Sir Wm. Dunbar, the then audit chairman, was appointed comptroller in his place. By 29 & 30 Vict., cap. 39, the crown was empowered to appoint the person holding the offices of comptroller-general of the exchequer and chairman of the audit commissioners to be comptroller-general of the exchequer and auditor-general of the public accounts (now usually styled comptroller and auditor-general), and one of the audit commissioners to be assistant-comptroller and auditor; and, on these appointments, the offices of comptroller-general of the exchequer and of audit-commissioners were abolished.

The comptroller and his deputy hold office during good behaviour, and are removable only on the joint address of both houses of parliament. They are thus rendered independent of the executive government and are enabled to exercise freely their functions of considering the strict legality of every payment demanded by the treasury for the public service.

Comptrollers-General of the Exchequer.

Since the creation of the office, in 1834.

1834. Sir John Newport, Oct. 11.

LORD HIGH ADMIRALS AND LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF THE ADMIRALTY.

This, as may be readily supposed, is an office of the highest importance, and in former times was frequently filled by the king himself, or by a member of the royal family. For many years it has, like the office of lord treasurer, been executed by commissioners, who are known as lords of the admiralty. The first lord is always a cabinet minister, and some of the other lords are also appointed on political grounds, and go out with the ministry. There are, however, always one or two permanent officials on the board, whose names are inserted in the successive commissions.

The lord high admiral of England appears always to have had jurisdiction over Ireland, as well before as after the Union; but the lord high admiral of Scotland was a separate office until the appointment of prince George of Denmark as lord high admiral of Great Britain on June 28, 1707.

Lord High Admirals, &c., of England.

The letter N subjoined to the names denotes the Northern, the letter W the Western, and S the Southern station.

LORD PRESIDENTS OF THE COUNCIL.

The lord president of the council presides at the privy council in the absence of the sovereign. He is appointed to his office by a declaration of the sovereign in council, and holds it durante bene placito. He is ex officio president of all committees of the privy council, with the exception of the board of trade, which has a president of its own. The office is now purely a political one, and the holder changes with the ministry.

PRIVY COUNCILLORS.

The number of the council was anciently about twelve, when it discharged the functions of state, now confined to the members of the cabinet; but it had grown to an unwieldy size before 1679, in which year it was remodelled upon Sir William Temple's plan, and reduced to thirty members. The number is now unlimited, but no members attend unless specially summoned. The members are selected by the sovereign, and are, or ought to be, distinguished by high office, wisdom, and political experience. The council includes the principal ministers of the crown, some of the judges, many diplomatists, and peers and commoners whose services to the state and whose position in it, whether past or present, render them eligible to advise upon public affairs. A privy councillor, even though a commoner only, is styled "right honourable," and has precedence of all knights, baronets, and the younger sons of barons and viscounts. He is admitted a member upon taking the oath prescribed by law, and forthwith takes his seat at the board, according to his rank.

Privy Councillors.

The first names on this list are those of the persons who formed the privy council of Charles II. at the period of the Commonwealth. They were sworn at councils held at the Hague, at Breda, and elsewhere, and were not re-sworn at the Restoration.

Sir Edwd. Nicholas, sec. st. to his late majesty, sw. at Jersey, Oct. 4. He became sec. st. to Charles II., and was again sw. of the council in 1660.

Geo., D. of Buckingham, sw. at Breda, Apr. 6.

Wm., M. of Newcastle, same time and place.

Wm., D. of Hamilton, sw. at Breda, Apr. 7.

The following privy councillors are named in the records; but there is no mention of the times when they were sworn.

LORDS LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND.
CHIEF SECRETARIES TO THE LORDS LIEUTENANT.
PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARIES AND UNDER SECRETARIES TO THE LORDS LIEUTENANT.

See Part X. "Ireland," post.

THE PRINCIPAL SECRETARIES OF STATE.

The earliest mention of a king's secretary (secretarius noster) occurs in 1253 (37 Hen. III.). There was only one secretary of state until 1539, when Henry VIII. increased the number to two, of equal rank and authority. These secretaries were either at the time of their first appointment, or soon afterwards, styled secretaries for the "northern" and "southern" departments. Both attended to home affairs, but foreign affairs were divided between them—the "northern" secretary taking the Low Countries, Germany, Sweden, Poland, Russia; and the "southern" secretary taking France, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Turkey, &c. Irish affairs were under the charge of the senior secretary.

In 1708, soon after the union between England and Scotland, a third secretary of state was appointed, styled the secretary of state for Scotland. This office was abolished in 1746; but in 1885, by 48 & 49 Vict., cap. 61, a "secretary for Scotland" was again appointed. He, however, does not rank as a secretary of state, and is not always a cabinet minister.

In 1768 a third secretary of state was again appointed, to attend to American affairs. He was styled the secretary of state for the colonies. This office was abolished in 1782 by 22 Geo. III., cap. 82. In the same year the terms "northern" and "southern" departments were discontinued, and the secretaryships were divided into "home" and "foreign," Ireland and the colonies being allotted to the former.

The "secretary at war" was not a principal secretary of state, but an official of inferior rank. On July 11, 1794, a secretary of state for war was appointed, and on March 17, 1801, the duties connected with the colonies were transferred to his department, he being thenceforth styled secretary of state for war and the colonies. The secretary at war was continued as a separate office, but from 1855 it was always held jointly with the secretaryship of state for war, and it was ultimately abolished in 1863 by 26 & 27 Vict., cap. 12.

On June 12, 1854, a fourth secretary of state was appointed, and the duties of the "war" and "colonial" departments were separated.

In 1858 the board of control was abolished by 21 & 22 Vict., cap. 106, and a fifth secretary of state was appointed for Indian affairs. He is styled the secretary of state for India.

The Irish secretary is not a secretary of state, but is chief secretary to the lord lieutenant of Ireland. He is not always a cabinet minister.

There are now five principal secretaries of state viz. :—

I. Home.
II. Foreign.
III. War.
IV. Colonies.
V. India.

These are always members of the Cabinet, and retire from office on a change of ministers.

The division of the duties of the principal secretaries of state into departments is purely a matter of arrangement for greater convenience in the despatch of business. Each secretary has full power to transact the business of any or every department.

UNDER SECRETARIES OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

See "Under Secretaries of State," ante p. 225.

There were at first two under secretaries for foreign affairs, both parliamentary; but in 1790 one of the under secretaryships was made a permanent appointment. In 1824 a third under secretary (parliamentary) was appointed, but this was discontinued in 1827. An assistant under secretary was appointed on Oct. 1, 1858, a legal assistant under secretary on July 14, 1876, and on the promotion of this officer to the permanent under secretaryship on Sept. 23, 1882, a second assistant under secretary was appointed; all these appointments being permanent.

SECRETARIES OF STATE FOR SCOTLAND

SECRETARIES FOR SCOTLAND.

appointed under 48 & 49 Vict. cap. 61. See Part IX. "Scotland," post.

POSTMASTERS-GENERAL.

"It does not appear at what precise period the crown undertook to be the regular carrier of letters for its subjects. The crown, doubtless, at a very early period, found it necessary to the exercise of the functions of sovereignty, to be able to convey with speed and security its own despatches from one part of the realm to another, and for that purpose it appointed certain messengers or runners called the 'Posts.' These posts were also employed for the personal convenience of the sovereign and the individuals composing the royal court. In course of time a 'Master of the Posts' was appointed, and the first of these on record was Brian Tuke, esq., afterwards sir Brian Tuke, knt., who held that office in 1516. The joint successors of sir Brian Tuke were sir William Paget, one of Henry VIII.'s chief secretaries of state, and John Mason, esq., secretary for the French tongue. The letters patent, dated Nov. 12, 1545, conveying to them this office, grant to them during their lives and the live of the survivor, the office of 'Master of the Messengers, Runners, or Posts,' as well within the kingdom of England as parts beyond the seas, with the wages or fee of £66 13s. 4d. a year, to be held by themselves or their sufficient deputy or deputies. But, besides his fee, the 'Master of the Posts' received from the crown the amount of his expenses for conveying the letters, of which he rendered an account. There is a succession of patents granting the same office, at the same fee, to other parties for life, in the reigns of Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I."—House of Commons' Report, July 2, 1844.

Down to 1823 this office was generally held by two joint postmasters of equal rank and authority, but from that time only one postmaster has been appointed. The office is now a political one, the holder resigning with the ministry of which he is a member.

CHANCELLORS OF THE DUCHY OF LANCASTER.

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster formerly sat as judge of the Duchy court of Lancaster, held at Westminster, in which causes relating to the revenue of the Duchy of Lancaster were tried. Another branch of the same court was established at Preston, in Lancashire, called the court of the county palatine of Lancaster.

The office of Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is now, practically, a sinecure. It is held by a member of the ministry, who resigns with his party.

PAYMASTERS-GENERAL OF THE FORCES

AND

PAYMASTERS-GENERAL.

THE office of Paymaster-General of the Forces was formerly one of the most lucrative in the gift of the crown, not so much on account of the salary annexed to it, as on account of the vast sums of public money that lay in the Paymaster's hands for long spaces of time; the whole of the money voted by parliament for the land forces passing through his department. In 1782 the office underwent a reform, and the Paymaster-General and his deputy were allowed fixed salaries in lieu of perquisites.

On the 1st December, 1836, by Treasury warrant, under 5 & 6 Will.

IV. cap. 35, the offices of Paymaster-General of the Forces, Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital, Treasurer of the Navy, and Treasurer of the Ordnance were abolished and the duties transferred to a new officer, styled the Paymaster-General. By 11 & 12 Vict. cap. 55 (Aug. 14, 1848), the offices of Paymaster of Exchequer Bills and Paymaster of Civil Services were also abolished, and the duties transferred to the Paymaster-General. By 35 & 36 Vict. cap. 44 (Aug. 6, 1872), and subsequent rules of court, the office of Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery was abolished and the duties transferred to the Paymaster-General.

This office was generally held jointly with that of Vice-President of the Board of Trade from 1848 until the abolition of the latter office in December 1868, under 30 & 31 Vict. cap. 72.

WARDENS AND MASTERS OF THE MINT.

THE Warden was anciently the chief officer of the Mint, but his office was abolished by 57 George III. cap. 67 (July 7, 1817), and the duties were directed to be performed by the Master, who was by that act constituted Master, Warden, and Worker.

For many years the office of Master was a political one, the holder being, sometimes, a member of the cabinet. From 1835 to 1850 the office was generally held jointly with the vice-presidency of the Board of Trade. In 1850 sir John Herschel was appointed Master, and he was succeeded by Professor Graham, both these appointments being non-political. Professor Graham died in Sept. 1869, and by 33 & 34 Vict. cap. 10 (Apr. 4, 1870), it was enacted that the office and title of Master of the Mint should be held by the Chancellor of the Exchequer for the time being, and the duties of the office were transferred to the deputy Master.

SPEAKERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE SPEAKER is chosen by the House of Commons from its own members, subject to the approval of the sovereign, and holds his office until the dissolution of the parliament by which he was elected. As Chairman of the House, his duties are the same as those of any other president of a deliberative assembly. Generally speaking, the business of the House could not be transacted in the absence of the Speaker, although to this rule there was an exception in the year 1606, when, during the illness of a Speaker, a prisoner was released from custody by order of the House. By 18 & 19 Vict. cap. 34 (Aug. 14, 1855), and certain standing orders of the House, power is now given to appoint a deputy Speaker when necessary. The Speaker has a casting vote upon divisions in which the votes prove equal.

THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

COMMONLY CALLED

THE INDIA BOARD.

THIS Board was originally established by Mr. Pitt's celebrated East India Bill, 24 Geo. III. cap. 25 (May 18, 1784). This act empowered the crown to appoint six privy councillors to be commissioners for the affairs of India, with very extensive powers; they having the "control and superintendence of all the British territorial possessions in the East Indies, and over the affairs of the United Company of Merchants trading thereto." One of the principal secretaries of state was constituted president; in his absence the chancellor of the exchequer, and in the absence of both, then the senior commissioner was to be president. Subsequently, however, to the passing of this act, it was found necessary to alter the constitution of the Board, and by 33 Geo. III. cap. 52 (June 11, 1793), it was enacted that any three or more commissioners might form a board, that the first-named commissioner in the letters patent or commission for the time being should be the president of such board; and that when any board should be formed in the absence of the president, the senior commissioner present should for that turn preside at the board.

The president was always specially appointed, and was one of the most important members of the cabinet, entering upon office and retiring on every change in the administration.

The lord president of the council, the lord privy seal, the first lord of the treasury, the principal secretaries of state, and the chancellor of the exchequer, for the time being, were ex officio members of the board, and the sovereign might appoint any other persons to be members also.

By the 3 & 4 Will. IV. cap. 85 (Aug. 28, 1833), the provisions of the previous act as to ex officio and additional members were repealed; but it will be seen that from the passing of this act fewer commissioners, other than ex officio commissioners, were named, and that, latterly, but one commissioner was named. The letters patent, since Sept. 1841, were addressed to one commissioner only, exclusive of the ex officio commissioners, and the whole powers of the former boards were practically vested in that one commissioner.

By the 21 & 22 Vict. cap. 106 (Aug. 2, 1858) the board of control was abolished, the government of India transferred from the East India Company to the sovereign, and the secretaryship of state for India created.

PRESIDENTS OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Boards of Health appear to have been first established by orders in council, dated June 21, Nov. 14, and Nov. 21, 1831, made under 6 Geo. IV. cap. 78. In 1848, under 11 & 12 Vict. cap. 63, a "General Board of Health" was created, consisting of the first commissioner of woods, forests, &c., as president, and two other members appointed by the crown. In 1854, under 17 & 18 Vict. cap. 95, the "General Board of Health" was reconstituted, and thenceforth consisted of a president appointed by the crown and a board composed of the secretaries of state and the president and vice-president of the Board of Trade. In 1858 the powers of the Board were transferred to the privy council under 21 & 22 Vict. cap. 97, and in 1871 these powers were (inter alia) again transferred to the Local Government Board under 34 & 35 Vict. cap. 70

THE BOARD OF ORDNANCE.

The Ordnance Department is of very great antiquity. A master of the Ordnance is mentioned temp. Richard III., and a clerk of the Ordnance as early as 1418. Henry VIII. constituted a Board of Ordnance by adding to the master and clerk a lieutenant, a surveyor, a storekeeper, and a clerk of the cheque. In 1604 James I. dignified the master and lieutenant with the style of master-general and lieutenant-general. The clerk of the cheque was abolished many years ago, and the lieutenant-general in 1831, but this latter office was revived for a short time in 1854.

By letters patent of May 25, 1855 (G.) the appointments of master-general, lieutenant-general, and principal storekeeper of the Ordnance were revoked, and the civil administration of the army and Ordnance vested in lord Panmure, the then secretary of state for war. The Act 18 & 19 Vict. cap. 117 (Aug. 14, 1855) recites these letters patent and vests all statutory powers, lands, &c., of the principal officers of Ordnance in the secretary of state for war.

The office of surveyor-general of the Ordnance was abolished about the same time, but was revived with somewhat different duties, by 33 & 34 Vict. cap. 17 (June 28, 1870).

CHIEF COMMISSIONERS OF POLICE OF THE METROPOLIS.

The Metropolitan Police District was formed by 10 Geo. IV. cap. 44 (June 19, 1829), and by this act two "Justices" were appointed, whose title was afterwards changed by 2 & 3 Vict. cap. 47 (Aug. 17, 1839) to that of "Commissioners of Police of the Metropolis." On the death of one of the commissioners in 1855 an Act, 19 & 20 Vict. cap. 2 (Feb. 28, 1856), was passed enacting that thenceforth there should only be one commissioner (to be styled "the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis") and two assistant commissioners.

THE POOR LAW BOARD.

The Poor Law Board was first established by 4 & 5 Will. IV. cap. 76 (Aug. 14, 1834), under which the Crown was authorised to appoint three commissioners, besides assistant commissioners, secretaries, &c. The appointment was limited to five years, but was continued by various Acts down to 1847, when a new Act, 10 & 11 Vict. cap. 109 (July 23, 1847), was passed, under which the power of the Crown to appoint commissioners was continued; but the lord president of the council, the lord privy seal, the home secretary, and the chancellor of the exchequer were made ex officio commissioners, and the first-named commissioner in each commission was to be styled the president. Under this Act the appointment was again limited to five years, but was continued by various Acts, and ultimately made permanent by 30 & 31 Vict. cap. 106 (Aug. 20, 1867).

By 34 & 35 Vict. cap. 70 (Aug. 14, 1871) the Poor Law Board was abolished, and its duties and powers transferred to the Local Government Board. Vide ante, p. 255.

THE BOARD OF TRADE.

Oliver Cromwell seems to have given the first notion of a Board of Trade, as in 1655 he appointed his son Richard, with many lords of his council, judges, and gentlemen, and about twenty merchants of London, York, Newcastle, Yarmouth, Dover, and other places, to meet and consider by what means the traffic and navigation of the republic might be best promoted and regulated, and to report upon the subject. Charles II., on his restoration, established a Council of Trade, "for keeping a control and superintendence upon the whole commerce of the nation," Nov. 7, 1660; and by patent, dated Dec. 1, same year, he also created a Council of Foreign Plantations. In 1672, these Boards were united, and various revisions followed from time to time. In 1782, by statute 22 Geo. III. cap. 82, the Board was abolished, and the business was managed by a committee of the privy council, whose duty was "to examine the custom-house accounts of all goods and merchandise exported and imported to and from the several ports in the kingdom, as well as from foreign ports, in order to inform the government of the advantages and disadvantages of the trade of this nation with other kingdoms and states, in regard to the balance of trade. And also to encourage our plantations abroad by endeavouring to promote their trade, and by discovering and encouraging such branches as were most conducive to their respective interests, as well as to those of the kingdom at large." In 1786, by an order in council, dated Aug. 23, the Board of Trade, as at present constituted, was formed. Vide infra. The president is now always a cabinet minister.

Establishment of the present Board of Trade.

Lords of the Committee of Privy Council appointed by King George III. for the consideration of all matters relating to Trade and Foreign Plantations.

Order in Council, August 23, 1786.

"His Majesty, having thought fit to revoke his Order in Council, bearing date the 5th day of March, 1784, appointing a Committee of Privy Council for the consideration of all matters relating to Trade and Foreign Plantations, and to declare the said Committee dissolved, was pleased to appoint a New Committee of Privy Council for the business above-mentioned, to consist of the following members:—

The Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.
The First Commissioner of the Treasury.
The First Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty.
His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.
The Chancellor and Under-Treasurer of the Exchequer.
The Speaker of the House of Commons.

"And also such of the persons of His Majesty's most honourable Privy Council as shall hold any of the following offices:—

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.
The Paymaster or Paymaster-general of His Majesty's forces.
The Treasurer of the Navy, and
The Master of His Majesty's Mint.

"And His Majesty was at the same time pleased to order that the Speaker of the House of Commons of Ireland, and such persons as shall hold offices in His Majesty's kingdom of Ireland, and shall be members of His Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council in this kingdom, shall be members of this Committee; and also that—

The Board of Trade, from the time of its reconstruction in 1786, consisted, as before, of six or more members, besides the ex officio commissioners; but the business of late years has been wholly conducted by the president, the vice-president, and the secretaries; no other members having been appointed since the year 1823, with the exception of Dr. Nicholl in 1846, and of sir James Stephen and sir Edward Ryan in 1848, all of whom were appointed for special purposes and in reference to certain duties. The vice-presidency was abolished by 30 & 31 Vict. cap. 72 (Aug. 12, 1867) "as from the next vacancy," and a parliamentary secretaryship was substituted. Vide "Vice-Presidents of the Board of Trade," infra.

WOODS AND FORESTS. LAND REVENUES. WORKS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

THE Crown Lands and Palaces were for many years managed by COMMISSIONERS or SURVEYORS, from time to time appointed by the Crown, and various statutes were passed extending, defining, or restricting their powers and duties.

In 1810, by 50 Geo. III. cap. 65, the then offices of SURVEYOR-GENERAL OF WOODS, FORESTS, PARKS, AND CHASES, and SURVEYOR-GENERAL OF THE LAND REVENUES OF THE CROWN were united under a Board of Commissioners, styled the COMMISSIONERS OF WOODS, FORESTS, AND LAND REVENUES. The status, powers, and duties of these commissioners were more clearly defined by a subsequent consolidating statute, 10 Geo. IV. cap. 50, which came into operation June 10, 1829.

In 1814, by Geo. III. cap. 157, His Majesty's Works and Public Buildings were placed under the superintendence and control of a SURVEYOR-GENERAL OF WORKS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

In 1832, by 2 Will. IV. cap. 1, the duties of the Commissioners of Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues, and of the Surveyor-General of Works and Public Buildings were united under a board of commissioners, styled the COMMISSIONERS OF WOODS, FORESTS, LAND REVENUES, WORKS, AND BUILDINGS.

In 1851, by 14 & 15 Vict. cap. 42, the two departments were again divided into two separate boards: (1) styled COMMISSIONERS OF WORKS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS; (2) styled COMMISSIONERS OF WOODS, FORESTS, AND LAND REVENUES. The first commissioner of the old Board of Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings was to be first commissioner of the new Board of Works and Public Building, the remaining commissioners being the principal secretaries of state, and the president and vice-president of the Board of Trade for the time being. The other commissioners of the old Board of Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings were to be commissioners of the new Board of Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues. The Crown was empowered to appoint other commissioners as vacancies occurred, and also to appoint a Surveyor-General of Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues, on whom the duties, rights, powers, &c., of the commissioners of Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues was to devolve, when the appointment of such commissioners was to cease. This last power has not yet been exercised.

The office of first commissioner of Works and Public Buildings is a political one. The other offices are permanent.

COMMISSIONERS OF EXCISE, STAMPS, TAXES, AND INLAND REVENUE.

There were three distinct boards of Excise, Stamps, and Taxes. In 1833 the same persons were by two separate letters patent appointed Commissioners of Stamps and Commissioners of Taxes, and by 4 & 5 Will. cap. 60 (Aug. 13, 1834) the two boards were consolidated under the style of Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes. In 1849 a similar course was adopted. On January 6 the same persons were appointed Commissioners of Excise and Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, and by 12 & 13 Vict. cap. 1 (Feb. 27, 1849) the boards were consolidated under the style of Commissioners of Inland Revenue.

LORD HIGH STEWARDS OF ENGLAND.

THIS office is of great antiquity, having been established prior to the reign of Edward the Confessor. The Lord High Steward was the prime officer under the king, the office was annexed to the lordship of Hinckley, in Leicestershire, and this lordship belonging to the family of Montfort, earls of Leicester, they were in right of it, Lord High Stewards of England. But Simon de Montfort, the last earl of this family, having made a bad use of the power which this office gave him, raised a rebellion against his sovereign Henry III., and was attainted and his estate forfeited. Henry and his successors in some measure abolished the office, and it is now only revived pro hâc vice, to officiate at a coronation or on the trial of a peer.

LORD GREAT CHAMBERLAINS OF ENGLAND AND THEIR DEPUTIES.

This office is hereditary, is of great antiquity, and was anciently of much importance. It was granted by Henry I. to the family of De Vere, earls of Oxford, by whom it was enjoyed for nearly six centuries. On the death of the 18th earl of Oxford, of this family, without issue, in 1625, both the office and earldom were claimed, together with other titles, by Robert Bertie, baron Willoughby De Eresby, in right of his mother, who was sister and heiress of Edward, 17th earl of Oxford. The earldom was awarded by the house of lords to the heir male collateral, in whose son it became extinct; while the office of Hereditary Great Chamberlain was adjudged to be descendible through heirs female, and was consequently confirmed to lord Willoughby De Eresby, who took his seat in the house of lords in that capacity in 1626. This nobleman was created duke of Ancaster and Kesteven in July 1715, and the office descended uninterruptedly in his family until the death of the 4th duke in 1779, when the barony of Willoughby De Eresby fell into abeyance, and the chamberlainship was claimed by five distinct branches of the family. The house of lords decided that it became vested in the two sisters of the deceased 4th duke jointly, and that they were competent to appoint a deputy. In favour of the elder of these sisters the abeyance of the barony of Willoughby De Eresby was terminated, and she became a baroness in her own right. The second sister married into the family of Cholmondeley.

LORD HIGH CONSTABLES OF ENGLAND.

THE office of Constable existed before the conquest, and seems to have been instituted by the Saxons. It was granted in the reign of Stephen to Milo de Gloucester, earl of Hereford, and went with inheritance, and by the tenure of certain manors in Gloucestershire,* by grand sergeantry, into the family of the Bohuns, earls of Hereford and Essex, and afterwards into the family of Stafford, as heirs-general to them. * The castle of Caldecot or Caldecote, near Chepstow, in Monmouthshire, was the residence of the Lord High Constables of England, and was held by them in virtue of their office.

1521 this office became forfeited to the king in the person of Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, who was in that year attainted of high treason, and it then ceased to be hereditary. The Lord High Constable is now only appointed pro hâc vice, to officiate at coronations or at trials by combat.

MASTERS OF THE GREAT WARDROBE.

The Master or Keeper of the Great Wardrobe was an officer of great antiquity and dignity. High privileges and immunities were conferred upon him by King Henry VI., and were confirmed to him by his successors. King James I. not only enlarged these, but ordained that the office should be a corporation or body politic for ever. The salary of this officer was £2,000 per annum. He was usually a personage of high political consideration, and subordinate to him were a comptroller, a patent clerk, and many other officers and servants.

The wardrobe establishment was abolished in 1782 by 22 Geo. III. cap. 82, and the duties transferred to the department of the lord chamberlain.

GOVERNORS AND CONSTABLES OF WINDSOR CASTLE.

See Part IV., post.

CAPTAINS OF HER MAJESTY'S BODY-GUARD, OR THE YEOMEN OF THE GUARD.

The Body-Guard of the Queen is the oldest corps in Her Majesty's service. The corps was instituted by Henry VII. in 1485, neary two hundred years before any regiment that is now in existence was raised; it was, in fact, the only standing force in the kingdom, with the exception of the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms.

The officers of the corps consist of a captain, who is now always a peer, and a member of the privy council, and who carries a gold stick of office; a lieutenant, an ensign, four exons, and an adjutant or clerk of the cheque. All the officers, under the captain, carry, when on duty, a silver stick of office, which they have the privilege of receiving, at a private audience, immediately from the hands of the sovereign.

The office of captain is now a political one, and the holder resigns on a change of ministry.

FORMERLY
THE BAND OF GENTLEMEN PENSIONERS.

The Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms (formerly styled the Band of Gentlemen Pensioners) is the oldest corps in England, with the exception of the Yeomen of the Guard and the Sergeants-at-Arms. This corps was instituted in 1509, soon after Henry VIII. ascended the throne, and was composed entirely of gentlemen of noble blood. The officers of the corps consist of a captain, who is always a peer and a member of the privy council, a lieutenant, a standard bearer, and an adjutant or clerk of the cheque. The office of captain is now a political one, and the holder resigns on a change of ministry. On March 17, 1834, his late Majesty, William IV., "was graciously pleased to command that "the Honourable Band of Gentleman Pensioners should be in future "called His Majesty's Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms."

POETS LAUREATE.

The origin of this office cannot be precisely traced, nor can a complete list be furnished. Warton, in his History of English Poetry, states that in the reign of Henry III. there was a Versificator Regis, and there is reason to suppose that Chaucer held this or some analogous office. The first mention of a Poet Laureate was in the reign of Edward IV., when the name of John Kay, or Key, occurs as holding that appointment. The name of Andrew Bernard occurs in the reign of Henry VII., and the name of John Skelton in the reign of Henry VIII. Edmund Spenser was the first Poet Laureate in the reign of Elizabeth, and from this time the succession appears to be tolerably regular. Wherever in the following list the date of the appointment is not given, it was probably shortly after the death of the predecessor.

DEPARTMENT OF THE MASTER OF THE HORSE.

MASTERS OF THE HORSE.

This office is always filled by noblemen of great rank. The Master of the Horse has the management and direction of all matters relating to the royal stables and of the revenue appropriated to this branch of the royal household. He has the privilege of using horses belonging to the crown, and of being attended by pages and servants attached to his department. In royal processions and on occasions of state he usually rides in the same carriage with the sovereign or is in immediate attendance. The office is now a political one, and the holder resigns on a change of ministry.

MISTRESSES OF THE ROBES.

THIS lady performs for the Queen, whether regnant or consort, duties analogous to those performed by the groom of the stole for the king; but mistress of the robes to a queen regnant is an office of more political importance than that of mistress of the robes to a queen consort. Mary, duchess of Ancaster and Kesteven, held this appointment in the household of Queen Charlotte, consort of George III.; and the duchess dowager of Leeds in that of Queen Adelaide, consort of William IV.

PART IV.

LORD LIEUTENANTS OF COUNTIES, GOVERNORS AND CONSTABLES OF CASTLES, &c.

LORD LIEUTENANTS OF COUNTIES—ENGLAND AND WALES.

The militia, or ancient land force for the protection of the kingdom against invasion, was originally under the command of commissioners of array, who, about the reign of Edward VI., were superseded by commissioners of lieutenancy for each county, at the head of whom was an officer styled a lieutenant, or lord lieutenant. Strype, in his Memorials, gives 1549 as the date of their first appointment, and statutes of 2 & 3 Edwd. VI. and 4 & 5 Ph. and M. speak of the office as then in existence. The right of the crown to appoint these officers, and through them to command the militia, was one of the matters in dispute between Charles I. and his parliament, but on the Restoration, by statutes 13 Chas. II. cap. 6, and 14 Chas. II. cap. 3, the right of the crown was expressly declared, and the militia of each county was placed under the lord lieutenant, in whom the appointment of deputy lieutenants and officers was vested either directly or by recommendation. These rights remained undisturbed until 1871, when, by the "Army Regulation Act" (34 & 35 Vict. cap. 86) the control of the militia was removed from the lord lieutenant and vested wholly in the crown.

Besides his duties as head of the militia, the lord lieutenant is considered the chief magistrate of his county, and justices of the peace are made by the lord chancellor on his recommendation.

Great difficulty has been experienced in procuring complete lists of the lord lieutenants, and in many instances it has been found impossible to commence earlier than the reign of George III. The county histories, which almost invariably give the sheriffs and members of parliament from the earliest times, seldom give a list of the lord lieutenants, although undoubtedly the highest office in the county.

SCOTLAND AND IRELAND.

For lord lieutenants of counties in these countries, see Part IX., "Scotland," post, and Part X., "Ireland," post.

GOVERNORS AND CONSTABLES OF CASTLES, &c.

CONSTABLES OF DOVER CASTLE AND WARDENS OF THE CINQUE PORTS.

THESE are very ancient offices, and in former days had important duties attached to them in protecting the country from invasion. They are now merely honorary posts, generally conferred upon some distinguished statesman, and the only emolument now derived from them is the enjoyment of Walmer Castle as a residence.

The two offices were formerly sometimes separated, but for many years past they have been held by the same person.

In compiling the present list, the lists given in HARRIS'S HISTORY OF KENT, HASTED'S HISTORY OF KENT, and LYONS' HISTORY OF DOVER, have been collated and, as far as possible, reconciled. There are, however, some slight differences in some of the earlier names and dates, and therefore, although the list now given will probably be found sufficient for all practical purposes, the works above quoted should, in any case of difficulty, be consulted, and the ancient records on which they rely examined.

CONSTABLES OF DOVER CASTLE AND WARDENS OF THE CINQUE PORTS.

C. signifies constable only; W., warden only; C. and W., both constable and warden.

PART V. HERALDIC.

EARLS MARSHAL, KINGS OF ARMS, HERALDS, AND PURSUIVANTS.

INTRODUCTION.

The earlier portions of these lists have been compiled from "Noble's College of Arms," which was published in 1805, and contains an account of the herald's college, and of the various members thereof. As might be expected, there is often, in very early times, some little uncertainty both as to names and dates, and in these cases it will be well to compare the present lists with "Edmondson's Heraldry," from which Noble sometimes differs. From the reign of Henry VII. the succession in each case appears tolerably regular.

The head of the herald's college is the Earl Marshal, and under him are a number of officers, divided into three classes:—

Kings of Arms. Heralds. Pursuivants.

Each officer bears a distinctive title, the origin of which it is, in some cases, not quite easy to trace. The creation and extinction of any particular office were entirely in the discretion of the sovereign, and in many instances the office became extinct on the death or removal of the first holder. In other cases, however, there has been an unbroken succession from the earliest to the present time, and these offices may now be considered permanent.

The following lists are divided into two sections—(1) containing the offices still existing; and (2) containing the offices which have now become extinct.

SECTION I. HERALDIC OFFICES STILL EXISTENT.

LORDS AND EARLS MARSHAL OF ENGLAND.

This office, until it was made hereditary, always passed by grant from the king, and was never held by tenure or sergeantry by any subject, as the offices of lord high steward and lord high constable sometimes were. The marshal was anciently styled lord marshal only; but Richard II., June 20, 1397, granted letters-patent to Thomas Mowbray, earl of Nottingham, and to his heirs, the style of earl marshal. James I. by letters-patent, dated August 29, 1622, constituted Thomas Howard, earl of Arundel and Surrey, earl marshal for life; and the next year granted other letters-patent, wherein it was declared that during the vacancy of the office of lord high constable, the earl marshal should have the like jurisdiction in the court of chivalry as both constable and marshal had jointly exercised. Charles II., on Oct. 19, 1672, granted this office and dignity to Henry, lord Howard, and to his heirs, with power to execute the same by deputy or deputies, in as full and ample a manner as the same had theretofore been executed by any former marshal of England. Under this grant the office is now held by the dukes of Norfolk.

Lords and Earls Marshal of England.

CLARENCIEUX KINGS OF ARMS.

THE date and origin of the title of Clarencieux is a little obscure. It was apparently created by or in the reign of Edward III., and was taken from the dukedom of his son, the Duke of Clarence. The office was at first that of Clarencieux Herald only, but when Edward IV. succeeded to the dukedom, on the death of his brother, he raised it to Clarencieux King at Arms.

The province or jurisdiction of Clarencieux extends south of the Trent.

NORROY KING OF ARMS.

THIS officer takes his name from those over which he has jurisdiction, i.e. the people residing north of the Trent, the inhabitants of the north being anciently called NORREYS.

The duties of this office were exercised as early as the reign of Edward I., but it is believed that the title of NORROY was not used until the reign of Edward II. or Edward III. It certainly occurs in the records of the latter reign. From that time until the reign of Edward IV. it is doubtful whether any officer bearing the title was ever created, but there are several records of the duties of the office being discharged by other kings of arms or heralds. Edward IV. revived the dormant title, and it has since continued without interruption.

BATH AND GLOUCESTER KINGS OF ARMS.

The office of Bath King of Arms was founded by George I. on June 1, 1725.

Gloucester King of Arms was founded by Richard III. in honour of his dukedom. There are prior traces of a Gloucester herald, but he seems to have been merely an officer of the dukes of Gloucester and not of the king. Richard Champney was appointed Gloucester king of arms on Jan. 4, 1484. He was either deprived after the battle of Bosworth, or, more probably, killed in that battle. The office remained in abeyance until January 14, 1726, when it was revived, and "inseparably annexed, united, and perpetually consolidated with" the office of Bath king of arms.

The duties of "Bath" are, as his name implies, principally connected with the order of knighthood bearing that name. "Gloucester," on his revival, was made principal herald of "the parts of Wales," and has special jurisdiction over that portion of the United Kingdom.

WINDSOR HERALDS.

This office is said to have been founded by Edward III. in the 38th year of his reign (1364–65), but until the reign of Edward IV. the records are uncertain, and the name of Windsor is applied to a king of arms and to a Herald apparently without much distinction either of person or office.

LANCASTER HERALDS.

THIS officer takes his name from the Lancaster branch of the Plantagenets. The title is believed to have been first used by Henry IV., who was formerly duke of Lancaster. He created a Lancaster king of arms, and appointed to the office Richard del Brugg, who held it till his death. Edward IV. first reduced the office to Lancaster herald, and afterwards abolished it. It was revived as Lancaster herald by Henry VII.

RICHMOND HERALDS.

According to some writers this title existed as far back as the reign of Edward IV., both as a herald and a king of arms. If it did, it was probably only attached to the household of a prince and not of a reigning monarch. The better opinion seems to be that Henry VII., who prior to his accession had been duke of Richmond, first made "Richmond" an officer of the crown, and the title has ever since continued.

YORK HERALDS.

This officer was named after the white rose branch of the Plantagenets. The office was probably created either by Edward IV. or Richard III., though some writers date it back to Edward III., whose son was created duke of York. There is some doubt about the order of the earlier names.

BLUE MANTLE PURSUIVANTS.

According to some this name was adopted by Edward III., in honour of the colour of the "field" of the French coat of arms, which he assumed. According to others, and more probably, it was taken from the colour of the garter.

The office was founded either by Edward III. or by Henry V., probably by the former.

PART VI. LEGAL.

JUDGES AND OTHER LEGAL DIGNITARIES.

INTRODUCTION.

Most of the lists in the previous editions of this work were compiled from Dugdale, or from some later writers who simply adopted his materials and added to them. These lists have now been collated with, corrected by, and compiled from those given by the late Mr. Foss in his Judges of England, a work of great authority and research, to which reference should be made in all cases of difficulty, as the learned author not only gives the authorities on which he relies, but is careful, where he differs from other writers, to give his reasons for so doing.

It would be beyond the scope of the present work to enter into anything like a detailed history of the origin of the various Courts in which sat the Judges whose names figure in the following list. Many volumes have been written on the subject, but the information contained in Mr. Foss's book will probably be found sufficient for all practical purposes. Here the barest outline must suffice.

Prior to the Norman Conquest each hundred or other subdivision of a county had its separate Court, which exercised both civil and criminal jurisdiction. Besides these, each county had its "County Court," which then possessed extensive powers and was altogether a far different tribunal to the County Court of the present day, the jurisdiction of which is very limited, and which is, as a rule, only resorted to in trivial matters. Finally, there was the "Witenagemote," to which cases of great importance were sometimes brought by way of appeal.

William the Conqueror introduced an entirely new system of jurisprudence, adopted from that established in Normandy, and the leading principle of which was to make the Sovereign the supreme head or fountain of justice, and to have the laws administered, if not by him in person, by judges appointed directly by and dependent upon him.

Under this system the ancient local Courts were practically superseded. They gradually became extinct or obsolete, or, if they survived, their jurisdiction was limited to petty local disputes.

The tribunal founded by William the Conqueror was styled the CURIA REGIS, and was composed of the King himself, some of his principal officers, and of the Bishops and Lords; or, as they were then styled, the Barons of the Kingdom. The King sometimes presided in person; in his absence the head of the Court was an official styled the CHIEF JUSTICIARY, or the JUSTICIARY OF ENGLAND.

It was soon found that judicial aptitude can only be attained by judicial training, and that a judge, to do his duty properly, must be a skilled lawyer. Hence there were gradually added to the bishops and barons who composed the Curia Regis a body of men who were called JUSTICIARIES, who probably acted as deputies for the Chief Justiciary, and, afterwards, as the business of the Court increased, divided the duties with him. They also went on itinera, or as it is now called, on circuit, to administer justice throughout the Kingdom; and on these occasions some men of rank or learning in each county were joined with them in their Commissions, all the Commissioners being designated JUSTICES ITINERANT. Towards the end of the reign of Edward I., commissions of Trailbaston were issued for the trial of certain offences, the Commissioners being termed JUSTICES OF TRAILBASTON. The appointment both of these justices, and also of the Justices Itinerant, ceased early in the reign of Edward III., when the regular Judges went circuit, as at the present day.

For some time after the Curia Regis was established, great inconvenience was experienced from the fact that it followed the person of the King, so that suitors were frequently compelled to travel great distances to prosecute or defend their suits. This was one of the grievances redressed by Magna Charta, which provides that "common pleas," i.e. the Court for the decision of suits between subjects, should "not follow the Court, but be held in some certain place," which was then or soon afterwards fixed at Westminster Hall. This was the origin of the Court of COMMON PLEAS. Other changes gradually followed, into the details of which it is impossible here to enter; but by the reign of Edward I., the Chief Justiciary had been superseded and the Curia Regis, divided into three distinct Courts, known by the names of the KING'S BENCH, the COMMON PLEAS, and the EXCHEQUER, or EXCHEQUER OF PLEAS; and these Courts continued until they were absorbed into the SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE in 1875.

THE COURT OF KING'S BENCH originally had jurisdiction only in criminal matters, or in cases where the Crown was otherwise interested, or was called on to interfere, in order to compel some inferior tribunal or some official or corporation to fulfil its duties, or to prohibit it from exceeding its powers. But, as the emolument of the Judges depended to a great extent upon fees, and, consequently, upon the amount of business done, and as suits between individuals were found to be profitable, the Judges of the King's Bench, by means of certain legal fictions, whereby a defendant was presumed to be in the custody of the Marshal of the Court, under a latitat or a bill of Middlesex, and therefore liable to be sued in that Court on any cause of action, gradually acquired or assumed cognizance of private suits.

THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS confined itself to its original jurisdiction over private suits, but its exclusive jurisdiction in this respect was gradually encroached upon by the other Courts. It, however, for many years, retained exclusive jurisdiction over "real actions," i.e. actions brought for the specific recovery of land.

THE COURT OF EXCHEQUER was founded upon a department of the Curia Regis called the SCACCARIUM, and originally had jurisdiction only in cases concerning the Revenues of the Crown. Afterwards, jurisdiction over private suits was acquired by means of a writ of quo minus issued by a plaintiff who pretended to be a debtor to the Crown and "less able to discharge his indebtedness for want of the debt owing to him by the defendant," which debt he was thereby able to sue for in the Exchequer Court. So long as the business of this Court was confined to Revenue Cases the Judges were frequently laymen, i.e. men not bred to the profession of the law, and it was not until the reign of Elizabeth or James I. that they were, invariably, selected from the serjeants-at-law like the Judges of the other Courts. It then became necessary to appoint another Judge to attend exclusively to the purely revenue or exchequer business. This functionary was styled a CURSITOR BARON. His duties were gradually transferred to various Government departments not connected with the administration of justice, and the office was ultimately abolished in 1856.

The Court of Exchequer, besides its revenue and common law jurisdiction, had also jurisdiction in equity cases; but this branch was abolished in 1841 by the 5 Vict., cap. 5, and the equity suits then pending were transferred to the Court of Chancery. The Judges of the Court of Exchequer retained their original title of BARONS down to the establishment of the Supreme Court of Judicature, whilst the Judges of the other Courts were styled JUSTICES.

At the head of each Court was a CHIEF JUSTICE or CHIEF BARON, the other Judges being styled "PUISNES."

At first the number of Judges in each Court varied from time to time, being increased or diminished at the pleasure of the Sovereign; but in the Reign of Henry VIII. the number had become fixed at four in each Court (the Chief and four puisnes), and so remained, with very rare exceptions, until 1830, when by 1 Wm. IV., cap. 70, the number was increased to five in each Court. In 1868, by 31 & 32 Vict., cap. 125, the number was again increased to six in each Court.

In 1831, by the "Uniformity of Process Act" 2 & 3 Wm. IV., cap. 39, the legal fictions above mentioned were abolished and statutory jurisdiction in all private suits given to each Court. The King's Bench retained its exclusive jurisdiction in all Crown suits and criminal cases, and all revenue cases were still confined to the Exchequer.

THE COURT OF CHANCERY rose from a department of the Curia Regis called the CANCELLARIA, where all writs, charters, and other documents were prepared for the Great Seal. The chief of this department was the CANCELLARIUS, or CHANCELLOR, who held the Great Seal. He was at first inferior in rank to the Chief Justiciary, but ultimately he became the head of the law, and in former times was generally also the King's chief minister. His title was, at first, THE CHANCELLOR OF THE KING, then CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND, then LORD CHANCELLOR, and finally LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR. The Great Seal was sometimes delivered to a LORD KEEPER instead of to a Lord Chancellor; but even Mr. Foss admits himself unable to distinguish between the two, either in point of dignity or duties, and in 1563 by 5 Eliz. cap. 18, their identity in rank, power, and privileges was explicitly declared. There has been no appointment of a Lord Keeper since 1760, but both before and since that date the Great Seal has been occasionally "put into commission," i.e., delivered into the custody of several persons styled "COMMISSIONERS OF THE GREAT SEAL," who jointly performed the Chancellor's duties.

Occasionally, a deputy or VICE CHANCELLOR was, in early times, appointed to assist the Lord Chancellor or act in his absence; but the office was not permanently established until 1813, when by 53 Geo. III., cap. 24, a VICE CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND was appointed. Afterwards, in 1841, by 5 Vict., cap. 15, extended by 14 & 15 Vict., cap. 4, and 15 and 16 Vict., cap. 80, two additional Vice Chancellors were appointed. On the death of Sir Lancelot Shadwell in 1850, the title of Vice Chancellor of England was discontinued and the three Vice Chancellors thenceforward ranked according to seniority of appintment.

By the statutes above referred to, the Lord Chancellor's jurisdiction as a judge of first instance was practically abolished and his duties as an equity judge were confined to hearing appeals. By 14 & 15 Vict., cap. 83, the "Court of Appeal in Chancery" was established, being composed of the Lord Chancellor and two new Judges styled LORDS JUSTICES.

The Lord Chancellor had a number of Clerks or MASTERS to assist him in the minor details of his many duties. The principal of these was styled THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS, the others MASTERS IN CHANCERY. The Master of the Rolls soon became a very important personage, and ranked next after the Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and before the chiefs of the Common Pleas and Exchequer. In addition to having the custody of the Records or ROLLS, he assisted the Chancellor in his judicial duties, his powers being gradually increased by 3 Geo. II., cap. 30, and 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 94.

The Masters in Chancery also assisted in working out the details of the Chancellor's decrees and in other minor matters. They were abolished in 1852, by 15 & 16 Vict., cap. 80, their duties being transferred to the Vice Chancellors, to be performed either by them in person or by a staff of "Chief Clerks," of whom at first two and afterwards three were attached to each Judge's Court.

The proceedings in the various Courts were, for many years, conducted in Latin or Norman-French, languages with which the ordinary suitor was unacquainted. He was, probably, equally ignorant of the law and practice of the Courts, and hence there was, from the very earliest times, a distinct class of men bred to the law who represented the suitors and pleaded their causes before the Judges, and from whose ranks the Judges soon came to be selected. These were anciently divided into SERJEANTS-AT-LAW and APPRENTICES. The Serjeants were appointed by the Crown, and it would seem that in very early times they were appointed without regard to their preliminary legal training; but it soon became the settled practice to promote them from the apprentices or ordinary barristers, according to their seniority, merit, or interest at Court. Down to the establishment of the Supreme Court of Judicature, every Common Law Judge must have been a Serjeant, and if, as frequently happened in more recent times, the person selected did not possess the necessary qualification, he was made a Serjeant, pro formâ, and appointed a Judge immediately afterwards.

As much of the business brought before the Courts affected the interests of the Crown, either in its revenues or its prerogatives, it was necessary that those interests should be properly protected. Hence the appointment of the ATTORNATUS REGIS or ATTORNEY GENERAL about 1277, (5 Edw. I.), and of the SOLLICITOR REGIS or SOLICTOR GENERAL in 1461, (1 Edw. IV.). These officers had a right of pre-audience over all the other members of the bar except the two most ancient of the King's Serjeants, which exception was abolished in 1813. Rights of pre-audience were also enjoyed by King's Serjeants and by those members of the bar who received the appointment of KING'S COUNSEL, a dignity which, with one or two doubtful exceptions, was not conferred until the reign of Charles I. At first, the office was what its name implied, and certain small fees and perquisites were annexed to it; but it gradually became a mere step of professional rank, and all the emoluments were abolished in 1830.

From the time of George I., to the present day, the Crown has also on special occasions, granted PATENTS OF PRECEDENCE to eminent members of the bar, whether Serjeants, King's Counsel, or ordinary Barristers, giving them certain rights of pre-audience over their fellows as fixed by their patents. Holders of Patents of Precedence have the same privileges as King's Counsel, but are able to hold briefs against the Crown, which a King's Counsel cannot do without a "licence to plead."

In addition to the Courts above mentioned which were generally known as the Superior Courts, it is necessary to refer to the ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS and the HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY because, although formerly inferior Courts, their jurisdiction has now been transferred to the Supreme Court of Judicature.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS were of very great antiquity. Every Bishop had his own Court, and, besides dealing with questions of theology and church discipline, had jurisdiction within his diocese over testamentary and matrimonial causes; but as the Archbishop of Canterbury's jurisdiction extended over the whole of his province, most of the important litigation came before his tribunals, the PREROGATIVE COURT OF CANTERBURY, and the COURT OF ARCHES. The Bishop's Courts were presided over by their Chancellors, the Prerogative Court of Canterbury by a "Master Keeper, or Commissary," and the Court of Arches by a Dean. In 1857, by 20 & 21 Vict., cap. 77, the jurisdiction of all the Ecclesiastical Courts in testamentary matters was transferred to the newly established COURT OF PROBATE, and in the same year, by 20 & 21 Vict., cap. 85, their jurisdiction in matters matrimonial was transferred to another new tribunal called THE COURT FOR DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CASES. These two Courts were distinct tribunals but were presided over by the same Judge.

The advocates who practised before the Ecclesiastical Courts were Doctors of Civil Law, and the Crown was represented by a KING'S ADVOCATE.

THE HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY was a very ancient tribunal with jurisdiction over all maritime matters including, in time of war, all questions of prize. It was presided over by the Lord High Admiral and in modern times by his deputy, who was styled THE JUDGE OF THE Admiralty. The Court was thoroughly re-organized, and its practice of procedure much improved in 1840 by the 3 & 4 Vict., caps. 65 and 66. The Crown was represented in this Court by an Admiralty Advocate.

The present Supreme Court of Judicature was formed by consolidating the old Courts of Chancery, Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, Exchequer, Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty. It was established by the following Acts:—

(1) The Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict., cap. 66).
(2) „ „ 1875 (38 & 39 Vict., cap. 77).
(3) The Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict., cap. 59).
(4) The Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict., cap. 9).
(5) The Judicature (Officers) Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict., cap. 78).
(6) The Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict., cap. 68.)

the combined effect of which was that the Supreme Court of Judicature was divided into two permanent divisions:—

I. Her Majesty's High Court of Justice.
II. Her Majesty's Court of Appeal.

I. HER MAJESTY'S HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

This Court originally consisted of five divisions:—

1. The Chancery Division, consisting of the Lord Chancellor (President), the Master of the Rolls, and the Vice Chancellors of the old Court of Chancery.
2. The Queen's Bench Division, consisting of the L. C. J. of England (President), and the other Judges of the old Court of Queen's Bench.
3. The Common Pleas Division, consisting of the L. C. J. of the Common Pleas (President), and the other Judges of the old Court of Common Pleas.
4. The Exchequer Division, consisting of the L. C. B. of the Exchequer (President), and the other Judges of the old Court of Exchequer of Pleas.
5. The Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division, consisting of the then existing Judge of the Court of Probate and Divorce (President), and the then existing Judge of the Court of Admiralty.

Power was given to reduce or increase the number of divisions and to abolish (on vacancy) any of the following offices: the L. C. J. of England, the Master of the Rolls, the L. C. J. of the Common Pleas, and the L. C. B. of the Exchequer. Under these powers the Common Pleas and Exchequer Divisions, and the offices of L. C. J. of the Common Pleas and L. C. B. of the Exchequer, were abolished by Order in Council dated December 16, 1880. Power was also given to appoint other judges from time to time, as vacancies arose, under the title of Judges of the High Court, altered by the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1881, to Justices of the High Court, the old titles of Vice Chancellor and Baron of the Exchequer being for the future abolished.

Under the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1881, the Master of the Rolls was removed from the High Court of Justice and is now a Judge of the Court of Appeal only.

II. HER MAJESTY'S COURT OF APPEAL.

THIS COURT, as ultimately settled, consists of :—

1. Three ex-officio Judges, viz., the Ld. Chanc., the L. C. J. of England, and the President of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division. The Master of the Rolls, the L. C. J. of the Common Pleas, and the L. C. B. of the Exchequer were originally made ex-officio judges, but the Master of the Rolls is now exclusively a Judge of the Court of Appeal, and the offices of L. C. J. of the Common Pleas and L. C. B. of the Exchequer have been abolished.
2. The Master of the Rolls.
3. Five (reduced from six) Ordinary Judges to be appointed from time to time under the style of JUSTICES OF APPEAL, altered by the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1881, to LORDS JUSTICES OF APPEAL.

The two Lord Justices of Appeal in Chancery were appointed two of these Ordinary Judges.

There has been for centuries a final appeal from the Superior Courts of Common Law, and from the Court of Chancery, to the "High Court of Parliament." This appellate jurisdiction has always been exercised by the House of Lords, and was expressly disclaimed by the House of Commons in the reign of Henry IV.

There is nothing to prevent the lay Lords from hearing and voting on appeals to their House; but for many years the judicial powers have been exercised by the "law Lords" alone, i.e. by such of the Lords as either hold or have held judicial offices. By the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, it was enacted that no appeal should be heard and determined by the House of Lords unless there were present not less than three of the following persons, who were designated LORDS OF APPEAL :—

1. The Lord Chancellor of Great Britain for the time being.
2. THE LORDS OF APPEAL IN ORDINARY, to be appointed under the Act.
3. Such peers as were holding or had held any "high judicial office," which term was by the interpretation clause defined to mean (1) Lord Chancellor of Great Britain or Ireland; (2) paid Judge of Judicial Committee of Privy Council; and (3) Judge of one of the Superior Courts of Great Britain or Ireland.

By this Act the Crown was empowered at once to appoint two Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, with life peerages, to appoint one additional Lord of Appeal in ordinary, on the death or resignation of any two paid Judges of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and another additional Lord of Appeal in ordinary on the death or resignation of the remaining two paid Judges of that Committee.

By this Act, also, the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary if Privy Councillors were made Members of the Judicial Committee of that body, and were required to sit and act as such.

Either by virtue of the royal prerogative or under the provisions of various statutes too numerous to quote, a final appeal from the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts, and from the Courts of India and the British Colonies a final appeal lay to the King or to the King in Council. This appellate jurisdiction was in practice exercised by a Judicial Committee composed of privy councillors who held or had held judicial office. For many years such a committee was appointed pro hâc vice as occasion required; but in 1833, by 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 41, a permanent committee was formed, the constitution of which has been modified from time to time by subsequent statutes. The principal change effected by the establishment of a permanent committee was the addition of paid members; but under the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, the places of these are gradually being supplied by the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary (see ante p. 351.) Appeals in probate and admiralty cases, which are now heard by a division of the High Court of Justice, now lie to the House of Lords, and not to the Judicial Committee.

In many of the following lists there is some little uncertainty about the earliest names. It must be borne in mind that in ancient times the various changes in judicial procedure were introduced very gradually, indeed almost imperceptibly, and by authority of the King or of the judges only, and not, as now, by an elaborate Act of Parliament, in which every detail is carefully set forth. Hence, it is frequently impossible to say exactly when a particular change took place or what was the exact status of particular officials during a transition period.

LORD HIGH CHANCELLORS. LORD KEEPERS. COMMISSIONERS OF THE GREAT SEAL.

See Introduction, ante, p. 347.

The Lord Chancellor, in addition to his judicial duties, presides over the House of Lords, his office being analogous to that of Speaker of the House of Commons, though there are some points of difference between the two; the most important being that the Lord Chancellor is at liberty both to speak and vote upon every question before the House. He is always an important member of the Government and of the Cabinet, and goes out of office with his party.

Lord High Chancellors, &c., of England.

Where no other title is given, that of Chancellor is to be presumed.

Those marked thus † are omitted from Foss's list, for reasons which he explains; but, as they are given in Hardy's list, they are included here with this distinguishing mark.

CHIEF JUSTICIARIES. JUSTICIARIES. JUSTICES ITINERANT. JUSTICES OF TRAILBASTON.

CHIEF JUSTICIARIES.

Those marked † are omitted from Foss's lists, and must be considered doubtful. It is also doubtful whether those marked ? were Chief Justiciaries or Justiciaries. Those marked ‡ were possibly Chief Justices of the King's Bench and not Chief Justiciaries of the Aula Regis.

1067. Odo., bp. of Bayeux and E. of Kent, ch. justr. of the southern div., and
Wm. Fitz-Osborne, E. of Hereford, ch. justr. of the northern div. of the kingdom.
1073. Wm. de Warenne, and Richd. Fitz-Gilbert or de Benefacta.
1078. Lanfranc, abp. of Canterbury.
Geoffrey, bp. of Coutance, in Normandy, and Robt., E. of Moreton, or Mortagne.
1087. Bp. Odo, again.
1088. Wm. de Carilefo, bp. of Durham.

1265. ‡ Hy. de Bracton, Aug.
1267. Nichs. de Turri.

JUSTICIARIES.

It is doubtful whether those marked ? were Justiciaries or Chief Justiciaries, and whether those marked † were regular Justiciaries at all. In the reign of Hen. III. (1216–1272) those Justiciaries marked B have been called JUSTICIARII DE BANCO, and those marked F have had fines levied before them, and for these reasons have been considered as belonging to the Court of Common Pleas, though it is doubtful whether at the dates of their service the Court of Common Pleas had been actually established as a separate court.

Justices Itinerant.

Prior to 1155 these lists are very imperfect, but from that date they are tolerably complete. Those marked † are doubtful, and those marked T were Justices of Trailbaston (See Introduction, ante, p. 346). Many of the Justices Itinerant were also Justiciaries or Judges, and will we found repeated in the other lists.

Those marked * are included in Dugdale's list, but Foss considers them to be only Commissioners appointed to deal with certain complaints which had been made against the Sheriffs of particular counties.

CHIEF, PUISNE, AND CURSITOR BARONS OF THE EXCHEQUER. PRESIDENTS AND JUSTICES OF THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE, EXCHEQUER DIVISION.

See Introduction, ante, p. 347.

CHIEF BARONS OF THE EXCHEQUER.

Those marked † are omitted from Foss's lists, and must be considered doubtful.

The title of chief baron of the exchequer was, according to Foss, first used in the reign of Edwd. II. The following were senior barons :—

1303. Wm. de Carleton, July 26.

1308. Thos. de Cantebrig, Oct. 24.

1310. Roger le Scotre, July 17 ; but Foss considers it doubtful whether they actually enjoyed the title of chief. Then comes—

1312. Walter de Norwich, Mar. 3, who was a few days afterwards designated "Capitalis Baro" in certain letters patent, appointing John Abel a puisne baron. Walter retired from his office whilst holding the treasurership, and on his re-appointment, May 30, 1317, he was distinctly appointed "Capitalem Baronem."

3. John Cross; knt. Dec. 7; d. 1842.
4. Geo. Rose; knt. Dec. 7; res. Dec. 1840, on appt. as mast. in chanc

Vice chancellor Sir Jas. Lewis Knight-Bruce was app. ch. judge in Nov. 1842, on the resignation of Erskine. He held both offices until the Court of Review was abolished in 1847 by 10 & 11 Vict. cap. 102, by which Act the jurisdiction of the court was transferred to such of the vice chancellors as the lord chancellor might name for that purpose.

By the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. cap. 106), as amended by the 14 & 15 Vict. cap. 83, extended by 30 & 31 Vict. cap. 64, the Bankruptcy Appellate Jurisdiction was transferred to the Court of Appeal in Chancery. (See list of the judges of that court, ante, p. 388-9.) This jurisdiction was continued by the 32 & 33 Vict. cap. 71, and on the passing of the Supreme Court of Judicature Acts (ante, pp. 350–1), was transferred to the Court of Appeal thereby established.

By the 46 & 47 Vict. cap. 52, and 47 & 48 Vict. cap. 9, the London Bankruptcy Court was transferred to the High Court of Justice, and appellate jurisdiction in bankruptcy was given to the Divisional Courts of the High Court of Justice, with an appeal therefrom to the Court of Appeal.

CHIEF JUDGE IN BANKRUPTCY.

Appointed under 32 & 33 Vict. cap. 71.

1869. Jas. Bacon, Dec. 31; app. v. chanc. July 4, 1870; knt. Jan. 14, 1871. Held both offices until Dec. 31, 1883, when the office of ch. judge in bankruptcy was abolished by 46 & 47 Vict., cap. 52.

BANKRUPTCY JUDGE.

Appointed under 46 & 47 Vict. cap. 52.

1884. Sir Lewis Wm. Cave, just. q. b. div. h. c. j., Jan. 1.

MASTERS IN CHANCERY. ACCOUNTANTS GENERAL OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

See Introduction, ante, p. 248.

The list of masters prior to 1597 is compiled from Foss. The list subsequent to that date is founded on that compiled by the late Sir Thos. Duffus Hardy.

The office of master in chancery was abolished in 1852 by 15 & 16

Vict. cap. 80, and the duties transferred to the vice chancellors and their chief clerks. The then existing masters were gradually released from their duties, the last retiring Aug. 8, 1860.

The office of accountant general of the Court of Chancery was created in 1726 by 12 Geo. I. cap. 32. Although there is nothing in that statute which requires such a qualification, yet no person has been appointed to the office without having first become a Master in Chancery. This office was abolished in 1872 by 35 & 36 Vict. cap. 44, and the duties transferred to the paymaster-general (see ante, p. 244).

ATTORNEYS GENERAL.

See Introduction, ante, p. 349.

The attorney general for the time being is the head of the bar, and his office is esteemed the highest below the bench. It has subsisted for six hundred years, though not under its present designation, the original title being ATTORNATUS REGIS. The appointment, which is by letters patent, was formerly "quamdiu se bene gesserit," but is now "durante bene placito," and the holder retires with his political friends on every change of administration.

SOLICITORS GENERAL.

The Solicitor General is next in rank to the Attorney General. The office, which was originally styled Sollicitor Regis, was first instituted in the reign of Edward IV. It is created by letters patent, and is held on the same tenure as that of the attorney-general. The honour of knighthood is now always conferred both upon the attorney and the solicitor-general, and, together, they are usually styled the "Law Officers of the Crown."

Solicitors General.

From the reign of Edward IV.

JUDGES OF THE COUNTY COURTS.

THESE courts were established under 9 & 10 Vict. cap. 95 (Aug. 28, 1846), and Orders in Council dated Dec. 19, 1846, and Feb. 4, and Mar. 9, 1847.

The judges' style and precedence are fixed by Order in Council dated Aug. 7, 1884. They are to be "called, known, and addressed as 'his honour' prefixed to the word 'judge' before their respectives names," and to have "rank and precedence next after knight bachelors."

This list has been compiled and very kindly furnished by Mr. F. Boase, the librarian to the Incorporated Law Society.

SERJEANTS-AT-LAW.

See Introduction, ante, p. 348.

The serjeants formerly enjoyed the exclusive right of pleading in the Court of Common Pleas during term time, but this privilege was abolished by 9 & 10 Vict. cap. 54 (Aug. 18, 1846).

The rule which required every judge of the common law courts to take, or to have taken, the degree of a serjeant before his appointment was abolished by the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873. Since that Act came into operation in 1875 no serjeants have been appointed, and the order is gradually dying out. A few years ago, their inn was sold and the proceeds divided amongst the then surviving members.

Full information concerning this ancient order will be found in Serjeant Pulling's "Order of the Coif."

SERJEANTS-AT-LAW.

Those marked * were afterwards raised to the bench. See Lists of Judges, ante, where their subsequent promotions are noted.

K. signifies King's Serjeant; Q. Queen's Serjeant; C. Serjeant for the Commonwealth; P.P. Patent of Precedence.

1834. April 25.

By warrant under the sign-manual it was declared that all barristers should after the first day of Trinity Term have an equal right with the serjeants to practice in the Common Pleas. By the same warrant, precedence was given to the following serjeants, to rank immediately after John Balguy:—

Vitruvius Lawes.
Thos. D'Oyly.
Thos. Peake.
Wm. St. Julien Arabin.
John Adams.
Thos. Andrews.

RECORDERS AND COMMON SERGEANTS OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

See Part VIII. "London," post.

PART VII. ECCLESIASTICAL.

ARCHBISHOPS, BISHOPS, AND DEANS OF ENGLAND AND WALES.

The ecclesiastical government of England and Wales is divided into two provinces, Canterbury and York. Canterbury comprises the dioceses of—

Bangor.
Bath and Wells.
Canterbury.
Chichester.
Ely.
Exeter
Gloucester and Bristol.
Hereford.
Lichfield.
Lincoln.
Llandaff.
London.
Norwich.
Oxford.
Peterborough.
Rochester.
St. Albans.
St. Asaph.
St. David's.
Salisbury.
Southwell.
Truro.
Winchester.
Worcester.

and York the dioceses of—

Carlisle.
Chester.
Durham.
Liverpool.
Manchester.
Newcastle-on-Tyne.
Ripon.
Sodor and Man.
Wakefield.
York.

By 26 Hen. VIII, cap. 14 (1534), power was given to the crown to appoint bishops suffragan to assist the other bishops in their duties. Under this act sundry appointments were made, but after 1567 the act remained in abeyance until 1870, when the practice of appointing bishops suffragan was revived. The following are the titles of the suffragan bishoprics.

Bedford.
Berwick.
Bristol.
Colchester.
Dover.
Guildford.
Hull.
Ipswich.
Leicester.
Marlborough.
Nottingham.
Penrith.
Shaftesbury.
Shrewsbury.
Taunton.
Thetford.

The bishop of Sodor and Man has a seat in the House of Lords by courtesy, but cannot vote. The two archbishops and the bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester, always have seats; but since the 10 and 11 Vict. cap. 108 (July 23, 1847), the first of the Acts under which the number of bishoprics was increased, only 21 of the other bishops, according to seniority of consecration, are allowed to sit. In the following lists the bishops of each province are, for convenience, arranged in alphabetical order, but the archbishops of Canterbury and York, and the bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester rank in the order named, and then the other bishops in the order of their consecration.

Each diocese with the exception of—

Liverpool.
Newcastle.
St. Albans.
Sodor and Man.
Southwell.
Truro.
Wakefield.

has a dean and chapter as well as a bishop.

There are also the following deans and chapters which are not attached to any diocese:

Westminster.
Windsor (Chapel Royal).

PROVINCE OF CANTERBURY.

DIOCESE OF BANGOR.

This see is of very great antiquity: the founder is unknown. St. Daniel was bishop here about the year 516, but, for nearly five hundred years afterwards, there is no certain record of the names of his successors.

By the first general report of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England, under 6 and 7 Vict. cap. 77 (Aug. 22, 1843), the union of the sees of Bangor and St. Asaph was recommended to take place on the avoidance of the sees, or on the avoidance of either, with the consent of the other bishop; and to this end, an order in council was gazetted Jan. 25, 1839; but public opinion subsequently set in so strongly (particularly in Wales) against this union, that the order was, in effect, annulled by 10 and 11 Vict. cap. 108 (July 23, 1847), and the two sees still subsist separately.

BISHOPS OF BANGOR.

516. St. Daniel.

DIOCESE OF BATH AND WELLS.

The diocese, although it has a double name, is but one bishopric. The church was built at Wells in 704, and was erected into a bishopric in 905. John de Villula, the sixteenth bishop, having purchased the city of Bath of Hen. I. for 500 merks, transferred his seat to that city in 1088. From this, disputes arose between the monks of Bath, and the canons of Wells, about the election of a bishop; but they were at length compromised by Robert the eighteenth bishop, who decreed that thenceforward the bishop should be styled from both places, that the precedency should be given to Bath; that, in the vacancy of the see, the bishop should be elected by a certain number of delegates from both churches; that he should be installed in them both; that both should constitute the bishop's chapter; and that all his grants and patents should be confirmed in both. So matters stood until the Reformation, when by 35 Hen. VIII., cap. 15, it was enacted that the dean and chapter of Wells should make one sole chapter for the bishop.

In 1538 a bishop suffragan of Taunton was appointed to this see under 26 Hen. VIII., cap. 14, but no subsequent appointments have been made.

DIOCESE OF CANTERBURY.

This see was settled by Austin, or Augustin, a monk, who first preached the gospel in England. The diocese included, until recently, a number of parishes in other dioceses; these were called Peculiars, it having been an ancient privilege of this see, that, wheresoever the archbishops had either manors or advowsons, that place was exempted from the jurisdiction of the ordinary of the diocese wherein it was situated, and was deemed in the diocese of Canterbury. This privilege was abolished from 1st January 1846.

The archbishop of Canterbury ranks first amongst the English bishops, and is styled Primate and Metropolitan of all England. He is also the first peer in the realm; having the precedence of all dukes not of the blood royal, and all the great officers of state. He is styled His Grace, and he writes himself Divinâ Providentiâ; whereas other bishops style themselves Divinâ Permissione. At coronations, he places the crown on the king's head; and, wherever the court may be, the king and queen are the proper domestic parishioners of the archbishop. The bishop of London is accounted his provincial dean; the bishop of Winchester, his sub-dean; the bishop of Lincoln, his chancellor; and the bishop of Rochester, his chaplain.

In 1537 a bishop suffragan of Dover was appointed to this see under 26 Hen. VIII. cap. 14, and this appointment was revived in 1870.

DIOCESE OF CHICHESTER.

Wilfride, the third archbishop of York, having been obliged to flee his country by Egfrid, king of Northumbria, came and preached the gospel in these parts; and Edilwach, king of the South Saxons, gave him the isle of Selsey, not far from Chichester, for his seat, where he built a church. Cenwal, king of the West Saxons, having won Edilwach's kingdom, built a monastery in the Island of Selsey, which was afterwards erected into a bishopric. Here the seat of this see continued, till Stigand, the twenty-third bishop of Selsey, removed it to Chichester about 1082. Anciently the bishops of Chichester were confessors to the queens of England.

DIOCESES OF GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL.

The Diocese of Gloucester was formerly part of that of Worcester and was erected into a separate see by Henry VIII. in 1541.

The Diocese of Bristol was erected into a separate see by Henry VIII. in 1542, and was formed chiefly out of the diocese of Salisbury, with small portions of Wells and Worcester. During a great part of Queen Elizabeth's reign, this see was held in commendam by the bishops of Gloucester.

By 6 and 7 Wm. IV. cap. 77 (Aug. 13, 1836) and an order in council dated Oct. 7, 1836, the dioceses of Gloucester and Bristol were consolidated.

By 47 and 48 Vict. cap. 66 (Aug. 14, 1884) provision is made for the separation of the two dioceses on the next vacancy of the see, but this act has not yet come into operation.

DIOCESE OF LICHFIELD, FORMERLY LICHFIELD AND COVENTRY.

This bishopric is said to have been founded by Oswy, king of Northumbria, about the year 656, and although it had, until very recently, a double name (Lichfield and Coventry), yet, like Bath and Wells, it has always been a single diocese. Offa, king of Mercia, by the favour of pope Adrian, constituted it an archiepiscopal see; but this title was laid aside on the death of that king. In 1075, Peter, the thirty-fourth bishop, removed the see to Chester; in 1102, his immediate successor, Robert de Limesey, removed it to Coventry; and bishop Roger de Clinton, according to some authorities (bishop Hugo Novant being mentioned by others), removed it back to Lichfield, but with great opposition from the monks of Coventry. The dispute was finally settled in a manner nearly similar to that adopted between Bath and Wells: it was agreed that the bishop should be styled from both places; that they should choose the bishop alternately; and that they should both make one chapter, of which the prior of Coventry should be the chief. Matters continued thus until the Reformation, when the priory of Coventry was dissolved by Henry VIII., but the style of the bishop continued as before.

By an order in council dated Jan. 24, 1837, the archdeaconry of Coventry was separated from this see and added to the see of Worcester; and the double name was then discontinued.

In 1537 a bishop suffragan of Shrewsbury was appointed (probably to this see) under 26 Hen. VIII., cap. 14, and this title was revived in 1888.

DIOCESE OF LINCOLN.

THIS diocese was formerly two sees, Sidnacester (not far from Gainsborough, in Lincolnshire), and Dorchester, in Oxfordshire. The former was united to Dorchester, after remaining a long time vacant, subsequent to the death of Eadulphus II. its ninth bishop.

The diocese was very large; so large, in fact, that although the dioceses of Ely, Oxford, and Peterborough, when originally formed, were taken from it, it still continued to be the largest in England. Portions of it have since been transferred to other dioceses. The bishops of Lincoln were heretofore accounted chancellors to the archbishop of Canterbury.

In 1537 a bishop suffragan of Bedford was appointed under 26 Hen. VIII. cap. 14. He was probably suffragan to this see, but when, in 1879, the title was revived, the bishop was made suffragan to London.

In 1567, a bishop suffragan of Nottingham was appointed (probably to this see) under 26 Hen. VIII. cap. 14, and this title was revived in 1870.

DEANS OF LLANDAFF

Down to the passing of the act 3 and 4 Vict. cap. 113 (Aug. 11, 1840), the bishops of Llandaff were also the deans and the archdeacons of Llandaff were also the sub-deans.

By that Act. (sec. 1), it was enacted that the archdeacons of Llandaff should be also the deans, but by 6 and 7 Vict. c. 77 (Aug. 22, 1843) and order in council, November 10, 1843, the two offices were afterwards separated.

DIOCESE OF LONDON.

This see was archiepiscopal in the time of the Britons and was intended by pope Gregory to continue so; but St. Augustine, whom his holiness had sent to convert the Saxons, was so pleased with his reception from Ethelbert, king of Kent, that he set up his staff at Canterbury, the capital of Ethelbert's dominions, which has continued the metropolitan see of England ever since. London still remained a bishopric. The bishop has precedency before all bishops of the realm, next to the two archbishops, and is dean to the archbishop of Canterbury.

In 1537 a bishop suffragan of Bedford was appointed under 26 Hen. VIII. cap. 14. He was probably suffragan to Lincoln, but when, in 1879, the title was revived, the bishop was made suffragan to London.

In 1537 a bishop suffragan of Marlborough was appointed under 26 Hen. VIII., cap. 14. He was probably suffragan to Salisbury, but when, in 1888, the title was revived, the bishop was made suffragan to London.

The deans of this diocese are styled "Deans of St. Paul's."

DIOCESE OF NORWICH.

This was once two distinct bishoprics, Elmham, in Norfolk, and Dunwich, in Suffolk. Felix, a Burgundian, who first converted the East Angles, founded the first see, and called it by that name. Bifus, the third bishop in succession from him, finding himself, from his great age, unable to bear so great a burden, got his diocese divided into two. Both sees suffered extremely from the Danish invasions, insomuch that, after the death of St. Humbert, they lay vacant for upwards of a hundred years. At length the see of Elmham was revived, and the see of Dunwich was united to it; but Herefast, the twenty-second bishop, removed the seat to Thetford, in Norfolk, where it remained until Herbert Losinga, the twenty-fourth bishop, removed it to Norwich, where it has continued ever since.

In 1536 bishops suffragan of Thetford and Ipswich were appointed (probably to this see) under 26 Hen. VIII., cap. 14, but the appointments were not continued.

DIOCESE OF OXFORD.

This diocese constituted a part of the diocese of Lincoln until 1541, when Henry VIII. erected it into a separate bishopric, endowed it out of the lands of the dissolved monasteries of Abingdon and Osney, and assigned to it the church of the abbey of Osney, for a cathedral. Five years afterwards he removed the seat of the see to Oxford. The present cathedral of Oxford was anciently dedicated to St. Frideswide; but when the see was removed to that city, it was styled Christ Church, and part of the lands appropriated by cardinal Wolsey to the maintenance of his colleges, was allotted to the dean and chapter.

The deans of this diocese are styled "Deans of Christ Church."

DIOCESE OF ROCHESTER.

This see was founded by St. Augustine about ten years after he came to England. The bishop has been styled chaplain to the archbishop of Canterbury; and that archbishop claimed, and, for several centuries, disposed of the see. His patronage was, however, often disputed by the prior and monks here, who at length obtained a papal decree in their favour. In all solemn pomps and processions, the bishop of Rochester was cross-bearer to the archbishop. The revenue of the see was at one time so small, that, for many years, the deanery of Westminster was held in commendam with it, for its better support.

In 1536 a bishop suffragan of Colchester was appointed (probably to this see) under 26 Hen. VIII., cap. 14, but only two bishops were appointed. The title was revived in 1882, but the bishop was made suffragan to the newly constituted diocese of St. Albans.

DIOCESE OF ST. ALBANS.

This see was constituted under 38 and 39 Vict. cap. 34, and order in council April 30, 1877, under which its establishment was to date from May 4, 1877. It was formed out of the diocese of Rochester.

The title of bishop suffragan of Colchester was revived in 1882, but the bishop was made suffragan to this see instead of to Rochester as before.

There are at present no dean and chapter attached to this see.

DIOCESE OF ST. ASAPH.

This bishopric is of great antiquity, having been founded in the sixth century, by Kentigern, a Scotsman, bishop of Glasgow, who, returning into Scotland, left as his successor a holy man, named St. Asaph, from whom the see takes its name. Who succeeded St. Asaph is uncertain, as no authentic records supply the information, and the list of bishops is not renewed until 1143.

DIOCESE OF ST. DAVID'S.

This see was once the metropolitan see of Wales and archiepiscopal; and for many years the seat of the supreme ordinary of the Welsh. When Christianity was first planted in Great Britain there were three archbishops' seats appointed, viz., London, (afterwards removed to Canterbury), York, and Caerleon upon Usk, in Monmouthshire. That at Caerleon being found to be too near to the dominions of the Saxons, was removed, in the time of Arthur, king of the Britons, to a place called Menew, in the furthermost part of Pembrokeshire; and since, in honour of the archbishop who translated it there, the see is called St. David's. It is from the first name that the bishops style themselves Menevensis. Bishop Sampson was the last of the archbishops of St. David's; for he, withdrawing himself, on account of a pestilence which raged in his diocese, to Dole, in Brittany, carried the pall with him. His successors, though they lost the name, still preserved the archiepiscopal power; and the Welsh bishops continued to receive consecration at his hands, until the reign of Henry I., when Bernard, the forty-seventh bishop, was forced to submit himself to Canterbury.

DEANS OF ST. DAVID'S.

Until the year 1840 the bishops of this see were also the deans. In that year the precentor assumed the title of dean under 3 and 4 Vict., cap. 113, sec. 1 (Aug. 11, 1840).

1840. Ll. Llewellyn, precentor, now dean; Aug. 11.
1878. Jas. Allen.

This see has undergone many alterations, from the time of its establishment to its final settlement at Salisbury. Its first seat was at Sherborne, in Dorsetshire; and the diocese then had episcopal jurisdiction over all those counties that now constitute the sees of Salisbury, Bristol, Wells, and Exeter. Wells and Exeter were dismembered from it, and erected into two distinct bishoprics. Another see was afterwards formed out of the remaining jurisdiction of Sherborne, and seated at Wilton, in Wiltshire; but this last, after having had eleven bishops of its own, was once more united to Sherborne. Subsequently the seat of the see was removed to Salisbury, the principal city in those parts; but the then bishop removed it to the hill called Old Sarum, and began to build a cathedral church there, which was finished by St. Osmund. This situation was chosen, perhaps, from the strong fortifications with which the hill was surrounded, and as being more out of the reach of the Danes. Bishop Richard Poore, in 1220, once more brought the seat of the see from Old Sarum to Salisbury, or New Sarum, where it has continued ever since. In ancient times the bishops of Salisbury were precentors to the archbishops of Canterbury. Edward IV. annexed the chancellorship of the Garter to the bishops of this see; but in the new statutes made by Henry VIII. this office was left solely at the king's disposal, and might be conferred on a clergyman or a layman. After bishop Ward's time, however, it was conferred without interruption, until recently, on the bishops of Salisbury.

Two bishops suffragan were appointed (probably to this see) under 26 Henry VIII., cap. 14, one with the title of Marlborough in 1537, and the other with the title of Shaftesbury in 1539. Neither appointment was continued; but a bishop suffragan of Marlborough was again appointed in 1888, and made suffragan to London.

BISHOPRIC AND DEANERY OF WESTMINSTER.

At the dissolution of the monasteries, Westminster Abbey was by Henry VIII., in 1539, erected into a deanery; and in 1541, he erected it into a bishopric, and appointed John Thirleby bishop. But he, having wasted the patrimony allotted by the king for the support of the see, was translated to Norwich, and with him ended the bishopric of Westminster. The dignity existed only nine years; and Middlesex, which was the diocese, was restored to London. The dean continued to preside until the accession of queen Mary, who restored the abbot; but queen Elizabeth displaced the abbot, and erected the abbey into a collegiate church, of a dean and twelve prebendaries, as it still continues. On the revival of the order of the Bath in 1725, the dean of Westminster was appointed dean of that order, and this honour has been continued to his successors.

DIOCESE OF WINCHESTER.

This see is of great antiquity, and has always continued at Winchester, which was anciently the capital of the West Saxon kingdom. The bishop is accounted sub-dean to the archbishop of Canterbury; and by Edward III. the office of prelate of the order of the Garter was conferred upon him, and has been continued to his successors ever since. The bishops were anciently reputed to be earls of Southampton, and are so styled in the new statutes of the Garter made by Henry VIII.; but that title does not now belong to them.

In 1874 a bishop suffragan of Guildford was appointed to this see.

DIOCESE OF CHESTER.

The bishopric of Chester was anciently part of Lichfield. One of the bishops of that diocese removing the seat of his see hither in the year 1075, occasioned his successors to be frequently styled bishops of Chester; but it was not erected into a distinct bishopric until the general dissolution of the monasteries, when Henry VIII., in 1541, raised it to this dignity. He added the bishopric to the province of Canterbury; but, soon after, he disjoined it from Canterbury, and added it to the province of York.

DIOCESE OF DURHAM.

This see was first fixed at Lindisfarne, or Holy Island, a small island on the coast of Northumberland; but from this spot the monks were driven by the invasions of the Danes. They next fixed themselves at Chester-on-the-Street, where they remained nearly two hundred years, and then settled finally at Durham. The bishops of Durbam take precedence next after the bishops of London.

In 1537 a bishop suffragan of Berwick was appointed (probably to this see) under 26 Hen. VIII., cap. 14; but the appointment was not continued.

Now Extinct.

This bishopric was founded in the infancy of the Saxon Church. Ten bishops enjoyed it in regular succession, and then, by reason of the spoil and rapine of the Danes, it was discontinued, Tydferth, or Tilford, the last bishop, driven away by these invaders, dying on a journey to Rome. The district in which the see was situated was anciently a county palatine; but is now annexed to the county of Northumberland, and forms part of the diocese of Durham.

DEANS OF MANCHESTER.

For many years prior to the constitution of the see, Manchester possessed a collegiate church originally dedicated to the Virgin Mary; but on its re-constitution by Queen Elizabeth it was called Christ's College. The establishment consisted of a warden and fellows. By an order in Council, December 12, 1838, and gazetted January 25, 1839, it was provided that on the constitution of the see of Manchester (then contemplated at an early date) the "Warden and Fellows" of the Collegiate Church should thenceforward be styled "Deans and Canons," and should be the dean and chapter of the new see. The see of Manchester was not constituted until 1847; but by 3 & 4 Vict., cap. 113, sec. 1 (Aug. 11, 1840), it was provided that the wardens should be styled deans, and they have since borne that title.

DIOCESE OF SODOR AND MAN.

The bishopric of Man was established or affirmed by pope Gregory IV. It had united to its diocese the Western Isles of Scotland, which, when Man became dependant upon England, withdrew their obedience and had a bishop of their own. The patronage of the diocese was given, together with the island, to the Stanleys, afterwards earls of Derby, from whom it passed to the dukes of Athole. The patrons nominated the bishop to the king, who sent him to the archbishop of York for consecration. The prelates thus appointed were not lords of Parliament, not holding from the king himself, and though allowed to sit in the House of Lords by courtesy, did not enjoy a vote. This disability continues, although, since 1829, when the last remaining rights of the dukes of Athole over the Isle of Man were bought up, the bishops have been directly nominated by the Crown. The bishopric is nominally united to that of Sodor, or Sudreys, i.e., South Hebrides, a diocese which comprehended all the islands, together with the Isle of Man. The bishop is still called "Bishop of Sodor and Man"; but the diocese consists of the Isle of Man only.

There are no dean and chapter attached to this see.

DIOCESE OF WAKEFIELD.

This see was constituted under the "Bishoprics Act 1878" (41 & 42 Vict., cap. 68), and an order in council dated May 17, 1888, under which its establishment was to date from May 18, 1888. It was formed out of the dioceses of York and Ripon.

There are at present no dean and chapter attached to this see.

BISHOP OF WAKEFIELD.

1888. Wm. Walsham How, tr. from Bedford, May 28, G.; first bishop.

DIOCESE OF YORK.

York is the most ancient metropolitan see in England, dating, it is said, from about A.D. 180, when Christianity was first, although partially, planted in England. But this establishment was overturned by the Saxons driving out the Britons. When the former were converted, pope Gregory determined that York should be restored to its former dignity, and Paulinus was made archbishop of this see, about A.D. 622. York and Durham were the only two sees in the north of England for many years, until Henry I. erected a bishopric at Carlisle, and Henry VIII. another at Chester. York was the metropolitan see of the Scottish bishops; but during the time of archbishop Nevill they withdrew their obedience, and had archbishops of their own. Many disputes arose between the two English metropolitans about precedency, as, by pope Gregory's institutions, it was thought he meant that whichever of them was first confirmed should be the superior. Appeal was made to the Court of Rome by both parties, and it was determined in favour of Canterbury; but York was allowed to style himself primate of England, while Canterbury styles himself primate of all England. The archbishop of York ranks next to the archbishop of Canterbury amongst the English bishops; he also has precedence before all dukes not of the blood-royal, as also before all the great officers of state, the lord high chancellor excepted.

In 1538 a bishop suffragan of Hull was appointed (probably to this see) under 26 Hen. VIII., cap. 14, but this appointment was not continued.

PART VIII. LONDON.

PORTREEVES, MAYORS, AND LORD MAYORS OF LONDON.

The Lord Mayor is the chief magistrate of London and the head of the Corporation. At first he was chosen for life, and afterwards for periods of irregular duration; now he is chosen annually, but is capable of re-election. He must be an alderman, and must have previously filled the office of sheriff. Those freemen who have been admitted into the livery of their respective companies are the electors of the Lord Mayor; they choose two persons from amongst the aldermen, and the court of aldermen confer the dignity on whichever of the two they please. The practice is for the livery to return the aldermen in rotation, and of these the court chooses the senior; but instances are not wanting in which this course has been varied, for the purpose of excluding some individual on whom the rotation of seniority would otherwise have conferred the office. The 29th of September is the day of election, and between that date and the 9th of November, when he enters on his duties, he is styled the Lord Mayor Elect.

Portreeves, Mayors, and Lord Mayors of London.

The year mentioned in the following list is that in which each Mayor served. His year of office commenced on the 9th of November in the year preceding.

Those marked thus * died in their year of office.

PART IX. SCOTLAND.

SOVEREIGNS OF SCOTLAND.

See Part I.—"Royal" ante.

OFFICERS OF STATE, &c., OF SCOTLAND.

LORD HIGH TREASURERS OF SCOTLAND AND COMMISSIONERS FOR EXERCISING THAT OFFICE. COMPTROLLERS.

THE OFFICE OF TREASURER was established on the return of James I. to Scotland from his long captivity in England.

In 1617 the Treasurer was ranked by an ordinance of James VI. as the first officer of state; and, in 1623, when that king determined the precedency of his counsellors, he was ranked next to the chancellor; in 1663, he was declared president of the exchequer. The office of comptroller, which was sometimes joined with that of Treasurer, and designated computorum rotulator, and that of collector of the new augmentations, both distinct offices from that of the Treasurer, were conjoined into one by James VI., and exercised by the Treasurer until the treasury was put in commission.

At the Union the Treasuries of England and Scotland were united, see ante, p. 156.

LORD HIGH ADMIRALS OF SCOTLAND.

This officer in Scotland had very extensive powers. He commanded the king's ships and sailors, and had the inspection of all the sea-ports, harbours, and sea-coasts in the kingdom. He had, also, a particular tribunal, where the judges, appointed by him, decided all causes relating to sea affairs, according to a particular code of naval law. His powers likewise extended to the cognizance of all crimes committed at sea, and to all controversies, actions, and quarrels, concerning crimes, faults, and trespasses committed upon the sea, or in the ports and creeks thereof, or in fresh waters and navigable rivers, so far as the sea flows and ebbs. This duty he executed by a deputy, commissioned by him, called the Deputy Judge-Admiral, who likewise judged in matters purely commercial, arising on the sea. After the Treaty of Union, a vice-admiral only was appointed by the sovereign.

* On his death, in 1672, the office of Admiral of Scotland reverted to the crown. The king then bestowed it upon his infant natural son, Charles Lenox, afterwards duke of Richmond and Lenox, with a reservation of a term for life to his brother James, duke of York. In 1673, William, duke of Hamilton, was appointed Admiral of Scotland, and after his death the office was managed by commissioners till the duke of Richmond became of age. He resigned the office to the crown in 1703.

LORD KEEPERS OF THE GREAT SEAL OF SCOTLAND.

At the Union the original Great Seal of Scotland was discontinued, or, rather, merged in the Great Seal of Great Britain. Another seal was substituted for various exclusively Scotch purposes, which was declared to have the same effect as, and is still commonly considered and called, the Great Seal of Scotland. The Secretaries for Scotland appointed by 48 & 49 Vict., cap. 61 (Aug. 14, 1885), were by that statute made ex-officio keepers of this seal.

LORD HIGH STEWARDS OF SCOTLAND.

The Lord High Steward was judge of the king's household, and the whole family of the royal palace was under his care. This office was held heritably for many years by one family, who, when surnames came into use, assumed for theirs the name of their office, Steward, or Stuart. This was done by Walter, the son of Alan, who was at the same time justiciar to king Alexander II., 1230. This family was frequently nearly allied to the crown, and at last succeeded to it in the person of Robert, eldest son to Walter Steward, or Stuart, in the year 1371. The Robert, just named, was the ninth heritable Lord High Steward of Scotland, and his son, John, afterwards Robert III., was created by his father prince and Steward of Scotland, since which time the eldest son of the king is natus Senescallus Scotiæ.

GREAT CHAMBERLAINS OF SCOTLAND.

The Great Chamberlain of Scotland was ranked by king Malcolm as the third great officer of the crown, and was called Camerarius Domini Regis. Before the appointment of a treasurer, it was his duty to collect the revenue of the crown, and to disburse the money necessary for the king's expenses and the maintenance of the royal household. From the time a treasurer was appointed, his province was limited to the boroughs throughout the kingdom, where he was a sort of justicegeneral, as he had power to judge all crimes committed within the borough. He was to hold Chamberlain-ayres every year, of which court he was the supreme judge.

This office was granted heritably to the family of Stuart, dukes of Lenox, afterwards Lenox and Richmond; and when their male line failed, Charles II. conferred it in like manner, heritably, upon his natural son James, whom he created duke of Monmouth. On his forfeiture it went to the new line of dukes of Richmond and Lenox; but that family surrendered the office to the Crown in 1703.

LORD HIGH CONSTABLES OF SCOTLAND,

The Lord High Constable is an officer of great antiquity. He had two grand prerogatives:—(1.) The keeping of the king's sword, which the king, at his promotion, when he swears fealty, delivers to him naked. Hence the badge of the Constable is a naked sword. (2.) The absolute and unlimited command of the king's armies while in the field, in the absence of the king; but this command did not extend to castles and garrisons. He was likewise judge of all crimes committed within two leagues of the king's house, a precinct which was called the Chalmer of Peace.

The jurisdiction of this officer came at last to be exercised only as to crimes during the time of parliament, which some extended likewise to all general conventions. The office was conferred heritably upon the noble family of Erroll by king Robert Bruce, and with them it still remains, having been expressly reserved by the Treaty of Union.

EARLS MARISCHAL OF SCOTLAND.

The office of Earl Marischal has never been out of the noble family of Keith. It was reserved at the Union ; and when the heritable jurisdictions were bought, it was in the crown, having been forfeited by the rebellion of George Keith, Earl Marischal, in 1715.

HERALDIC OFFICERS OF SCOTLAND.

In Scotland all heraldic matters are transacted in what is called the Lyon Court, at the head of which is Lyon King of Arms. Under him was a deputy called Lyon Depute; but in 1866 the then holder of that office was appointed Lyon King of Arms, and the two offices may now be considered as united. There are also a Lyon Clerk and a Lyon Clerk Depute besides several Heralds and Pursuivants. For further information the reader is referred to Seton's Scotch Heraldry, from which the following lists have been compiled.

LYON KINGS OF ARMS.

JUDGES AND OTHER LEGAL DIGNITARIES OF SCOTLAND.

LORD CHANCELLORS OF SCOTLAND.

The Lord Chancellor was the chief in matters of justice. In the laws of Malcolm II. he is placed before all other officers, and from these laws it appears that he had the principal direction of the Chancery or Chancellary. He had the custody of the great seal of Scotland, and it was his duty to examine the king's grants and other deeds which were to pass under it, and to cancel them if they appeared against law, or were obtained surreptitiously, or by false suggestions.

James VI. ordained that the Lord Chancellor should have the first place and rank in the nation, ratione officii, by virtue whereof he presided in the parliament, and in all courts of judicature. After the Restoration of Charles II. the Lord Chancellor was declared by act of parliament, virtute officii, president in all the meetings of parliament, or other public judicatures of the kingdom.

The office of Lord Chancellor was abolished at the Union, there being no further use for the judicial part of the office, and a lord keeper of the seal then substituted for the great seal of Scotland was appointed.

LORD PRESIDENTS AND JUDGES OF THE COURT OF SESSION.

The Court of Session is the supreme civil court of justice in Scotland. It received its name and derives its constitution under a statute passed in the 20th year of James V., 1532. Previously to this year the functions now discharged by this court were performed by parliamentary committees; and until the period of the Revolution the condition of the court was very defective. The judges, upon their appointment, assume a title from their surnames or their estates, which is conceded to them by ancient usage, and though purely official, is recognised by courtesy in social intercourse.

The Court, the constitution of which has been modified from time to time by a series of statutes too numerous to quote, is now composed of thirteen judges, who sit in an inner house or court of appeal, and an outer house or court of first instance. The inner house sits in two divisions of four judges each, the Lord Justice General (Lord President) presiding in the first division, and the Lord Justice Clerk in the second; the outer house is composed of five judges, who sit in separate courts as judges of first instance.

Extraordinary Lords of Session.

The designation "Extraordinary Lords of Session," expresses a distinction between those functionaries and the Ordinary Lords of Session. The Extraordinary Lords of Session were lords of parliament appointed by the crown to sit and vote in court along with the permanent judges. This "manifest impropriety," as a writer justly termed it, was abolished by 10 Geo. I., cap. 19 (1723).

LORDS JUSTICES GENERAL AND JUDGES OF THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

The Lord Chief Justice, or, as he was called in Scotland, the Lord Justice General, was placed next in rank to the lord chancellor. He was anciently, before the court of session was erected, the grand justiciar of Scotland, and his court was originally the only sovereign court of the kingdom, and had a great part of that jurisdiction which now belongs to the court of session. Even after the erection of that court several civil causes came before it; but at length its powers were confined to criminal matters alone, and the Lord Justice General was empowered to name his own deputies. In 1671 the court of justiciary was constituted, nearly as it now stands, by a commission under the great seal, afterwards ratified by regulations made in 1672. The kingdom was divided into three circuits, to which the judges went once a year; but after the suppression of the heritable jurisdictions, the assizes were held twice a year. Anciently the kingdom was divided into two justiciaries, viz. the north and the south of the Frith of Forth. The office of Lord Justice General was hereditary in several families; but the family of Argyll surrendered it to the crown, for a valuable consideration, in 1628, and this arrangement was ratified by parliament in 1633. From that time it was disposed of either for life, or during pleasure, by a commission under the great seal, until the year 1836, when, under 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wm. IV., cap. 69, the office was united with that of Lord President of the Court of Session.

The High Court of Justiciary was originally composed of the Lord Justice General, or first Judge of Justiciary, the Lord Justice Clerk, or second Judge of Justiciary, and five other judges or commissioners selected from the Lords of Session; but by 50 & 51 Vict., cap. 35 (Sept. 16, 1887), the constitution and procedure of the court were remodelled, and all the Lords of Session are now commissioners of the High Court of Justiciary.

JUDGES OF THE COURT OF EXCHEQUER OF SCOTLAND.

The old Scotch Court of Exchequer was reserved by the Act of Union, but was superseded on May 1, 1708, by a new court established by 6 Anne, cap. 53 (cap. 26, Ruffhead's statutes). This Court was at first composed of a chief and four puisne barons; but by 1 Wm. IV., cap. 69 (1830), it was provided that no vacancies should be filled up until the court was reduced to a chief and one puisne baron; and by 2 Wm. IV., cap. 54 (1832), it was provided that no new judges should be appointed, and that on the death of the last Exchequer Judge the duties should be performed by one of the lords of session to be appointed by the crown. This arrangement was modified by 2 & 3 Vict., cap. 36 (1839), which provided that the duties of Exchequer Judges should be performed by two of the lords of session to be fixed by themselves in rotation; and by 19 & 20 Vict., cap. 56 (1856), a further alteration took place, and it was provided that the duties should be performed by one of the lords of session, to be appointed by the crown, and styled the Lord Ordinary in Exchequer. The administrative duties of the Court of Exchequer were transferred to the Treasury by 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 13 (1833). The old Exchequer Court came to an end on the death of Baron Murray in 1838. Adam Gillies (Lord Gillies), a lord of session, was then appointed under 2 Wm. IV., cap. 54, and on his death in 1839 the other lords of session were appointed in rotation under 2 & 3 Vict., cap. 36.

JUDGES OF THE ADMIRALTY COURT OF SCOTLAND.

By the Act of Union the Scottish Admiralty Court was to be continued until regulated by parliament. It was afterwards gradually shorn of its jurisdiction, and ultimately abolished by 6 Geo. IV., cap. 120 (1825). Its prize jurisdiction was transferred to the English Admiralty Court, and by 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wm. IV., cap 69 (1830) its civil jurisdiction was transferred to the Court of Session and the Sheriff Court; and its criminal jurisdiction to the Court of Justiciary and the Sheriff Court.

LORD CLERK REGISTERS OF SCOTLAND.

The Clerk Register was anciently the principal clerk in the kingdom; from him all other clerks, who were his deputies, derived their immediate authority, and he himself acted as clerk to the parliament and council. He was called Clericus Rotulorum, because the proceedings of parliament, and the minutes and judgments of other courts, were written upon rolls of parchment (hence the term Rotuli Parliamenti), which were preserved by him in the public archives. By the Treaty of Union, the preservation of the registers was particularly provided for; and the return of the election of the sixteen Scottish peers to the British parliament was ordered to be made by the Clerk Register, or by two of the clerks of session deputed by him for that purpose.

LORD ADVOCATES OF SCOTLAND.

The Lord Advocate holds much the same position in Scotland as the Attorney General in England. His business is to pursue and defend in all causes wherein the sovereign has an interest. His office is very honourable, and he is, by virtue of it, styled Lord. And, as it was decided, in 1685, in the parliament of Paris (on which the Court of Session is modelled), that the king's advocate might at the same time be a judge, so in like manner was it allowed in Scotland; and both Sir William Oliphant and Sir John Nesbit were Lords Advocate and Lords of Session at the same time. This practice has, however, now been long discontinued.

ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF SCOTLAND.

The Episcopal Church of Scotland was the established Church of that country down to the period of the Reformation. From that time it had a chequered existence, being alternately abolished and restored until it was finally disestablished at the Revolution. The history of its vicissitudes is too long to be even epitomised here, but a full account will be found in Burton's History of Scotland and in the somewhat numerous histories of the Scottish Church.

PART I.—ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF SCOTLAND BEFORE THE REVOLUTION.

Scotland had two Archbishoprics—

I.—St. Andrew's.

to which were suffragan the sees of—

Aberdeen.
Brechin.
Caithness.
Dunblane.
Dunkeld.
Edinburgh.
Moray.
Orkney.
Ross.

II.—Glasgow.

to which were suffragan the sees of—

Argyll.
Galloway.
The Isles.

DIOCESE OF ST. ANDREW'S.

Abernethy, in Perthshire, was the metropolis of the kingdom of the Picts. The collegiate church there was dedicated to St. Bridget, or St. Bryde, who died about 523. Kenneth III., having conquered the Picts, translated the see from Abernethy, and called it St. Andrew's, and the bishop was styled Maximus Scotorum Episcopus. It was erected into an Archbishopric in 1470, by Pope Paul II.

Bishops of St. Andrew's.

According to Sir R. Sibbald.

* * Adrian; killed by the Danes, and buried in the island of May, in 872.
872. Kellach I.; sat four years, Constantine II. being King.
877. Malisius I.; sat eight years, Gregory the Great being king.
904. Kellach II.
* * Malmore.
* * Malisius II.
* * Alwinus.
* * Malduinus.
* * Tuthaldus.
* * Fothadus; consec. in 954.
* * Gregorius; sat two years.
* * Turgot, prior of Durham; sat 25 or 26 years.
* * Godericus, who anointed king Edgar; d. 1107.
1120. Eadmerus, a monk of Canterbury.
1122. Robert, prior of Scone; founded the priory of St. Andrew's, and obtained land and many privileges for it from David I.
1159. Walter, abb. of Melrose, elected; but did not accept.
* * Ernald, abb. of Kelso; legate in Scotland for the pope; founded the cathedr. ch. of St. Andrew's, but d. soon after it was begun.
1163. Richard, chapl. to Malcolm IV.
1178. John Scot, archdn. of St. Andrew's. Hugh, chapl. to king William. A double election.[*]
1188. Roger (son of the E. of Leicester); ld. chanc.

[*] John was elected bishop, but the king opposed him, and caused his chaplain, Hugh, to be consecrated. John went to Rome to plead his cause, and the Pope (Alexander III.) was so convinced of the justness of it, that he sent him home with a nuncio, who made Matthew, bishop of Aberdeen, consecrate him in the abbey of Holyrood House. Still the king continued inflexible, and John went a second time to Rome, and continued seven years in voluntary exile. The pope was about to interdict the kingdom; but John prevailed with him to desist, and the bishopric of Dunkeld falling vacant, the king agreed that John should have it, and he accepted it.

1202. Wm. Malvoisine; tr. from Glasgow; ld. chanc.
1233. David Benham, grt. chambn. to the king.
1253. Abel, archdn. of St. Andrew's.

1298. Wm. Lamberton, chanc. of diocese of Glasgow.
1328. Jas. Bennet, archdn. of St. Andrew's.
1332. Wm. Bell, D. of Dunkeld, elect.; but the pope refused to confirm the choice.
See vacant 9 years.
1341. Wm. Landell, rect. of Kinkell.
1383. Stephen de Paye, prior of St. Andrew's; taken prisoner at sea by the English, on his way to Rome; d. at Alnwick, soon after his election.
* * Walter Trail, canon of St. Andrew's; app. by the pope without an election; built the castle of St. Andrew's.
1401. Thos. Stuart (son to Robert II.); archdn. of St. Andrew's.
1404. Gilbert Greenlaw, bp. of Aberdeen, ld. chanc.; elect., but
* * Hy. Wardlaw, prec. of the see of Glasgow; being at Avignon, he was preferred to this see, instead of Gilbert, bp. of Aberdeen, and was consec. there the same year.
1440. Jas. Kennedy; tr. from Dunkeld; ld. chanc.; a younger son of Jas. Kennedy of Dunure, by the lady Mary, countess of Angus, dau. of Robert III.

ARCHBISHOPS OF ST. ANDREW'S.

1684. Arthur Ross, tr. from Glasgow; the last abp. of this see; ejected soon after the Revolution in 1688.

There were no post-Revolution bishops of this see.

DIOCESE OF ABERDEEN.

KING MALCOLM II., having gained a great victory over the Danes in 1010, resolved to found a new bishopric in token of his gratitude for his success, and pitched upon Mortlach, in Banffshire. The see was only inferior, in point of precedence, to St. Andrews, but its revenue was inconsiderable. Nectanus, the fourth and last prelate who sat at Mortlach, was removed by David I., in 1139, to Old Aberdeen, whither the see was entirely transferred in 1154, and where it continued until the Revolution.

Bishops of Mortlach.

DIOCESE OF DUNBLANE.

In Dunblane, a small town in Strathallan, there existed anciently a convent of Culdees, which David I. erected into an episcopal see about the year 1142. The church was dedicated to St. Blaan, who had been superior of the convent in the time of Kenneth III.; and from this saint the place took its name.

The list of the Bishops is very incorrect; but the fault is now beyond remedy.

DIOCESE OF ORKNEY.

The accounts of the founding of this see are various and uncertain, and considering that the Orkney and Shetland islands were subject sometimes to the Norwegians, and sometimes to the Scots, little authenticated matter can be expected. The seat of the see was at Kirkwall. The church was dedicated to St. Servanus, and was one of the only two cathedral churches in Scotland (that of Glasgow being the other) that escaped the fury of the mob. The foundation of this see is by some ascribed to St. Servanus, who was ordained a bishop by St. Palladius, and sent to the Scots by pope Celestine I. in the beginning of the fifth century; others say that St. Columb was the founder. The diocese contained the islands of Orkney and Shetland.

DIOCESE OF GLASGOW.

Historians disagree with respect to the foundation of this see: that it is, next to St. Andrews, of higher antiquity than any other in Scotland, is, however, beyond all doubt. The founder is nowhere mentioned with any certainty. Kennet says, the see was instituted by St. Kentigern, alias Mungo, in the year 560. Yet some doubt whether Kentigern was ever bishop of Glasgow, and speak of him as being only a holy man, who had a cell there, and whose sanctity was held in such high veneration, that when the cathedral church was dedicated, it was to him. Dr. Heylyn, speaking of the see of St. Asaph, in Wales, says, "that the see was founded in 583 by St. Kentigern, a Scot, then bishop of Glasgow. In that see he was the first bishop; and on his return to Scotland, he was succeeded as bishop by St. Asaph, to whom the cathedral there is dedicated." From this it may be inferred that St. Kentigern, alias Mungo, founded the see of Glasgow, and was the first bishop. The see was made an archbishopric in 1491.

The diocese was of great extent, till the see of Edinburgh was partly taken out of it. The want of records leaves a vast blank in the catalogue of its bishops.

DIOCESE OF ARGYLL.

John Scot, bishop of Dunkeld, finding his see so large that he could not pay that attention to it which his conscience dictated, made a representation to that effect to the court of Rome; whereupon pope Innocent III. disjoined from his diocese all that now constitutes the shire of Argyll, on the main land, together with some of the Western Islands, particularly the island of Lismore, which was made the bishop's seat of the new see: hence the bishops of Argyll are frequently styled bishops of Lismore. The church was dedicated to St. Molocus, who lived about 1160, and whose bones were translated to the island. The diocese contained Argyllshire, Lochaber, and some of the isles.

DIOCESE OF GALLOWAY.

This was a very ancient see, said to have been founded by St. Ninian, who was the first bishop, and who had previously converted many of the inhabitants to the Christian religion. This saint, about the close of the fifth or beginning of the sixth century, built a church of white stone, in honour of St. Martin, and from it the place took its name Whitern, or Whitehorn.

This see contained, formerly, not only the Æbudæ, or Western Isles, but the Isle of Man, which for more than four hundred years has been a separate bishopric. The prelates had three places of residence, viz., the isles of Icolumkill, Man, and Bute; and, in ancient writs are variously styled Episcopi Manniæ et Insularum, Episcopi Æbudarum, and Episcopi Sodorenses, which last title is still retained by the bishops of the Isles, and the bishops of the Isle of Man.

During the great contest between the houses of Bruce and Baliol for the throne of Scotland, Edward III. of England made himself master of the Isle of Man, and it has ever since remained an appendage of the crown of England. The lords of the isle of Man set up bishops of their own, and the Scottish monarchs continued their bishops of the Isles, of which the records are but imperfect.

PART II.—BISHOPS OF SCOTLAND AFTER THE REVOLUTION.

At the Revolution of 1688 the episcopal Church of Scotland was disestablished, and thenceforward became a mere voluntary association. The apostolical succession of bishops was, however, continued, and the names of most of the former dioceses have been retained or revived. From time to time two or more sees have been united under one bishop and again separated, a system which, though no doubt adopted for good practical reasons, renders the succession of the post-Revolution bishops somewhat intricate and difficult to follow.

BISHOPS OF SCOTLAND WHO HAVE HELD THE OFFICE OF PRIMUS.

Anciently, no bishop in Scotland had the title of archbishop, but one bishop had a precedency under the title of Primus Scotiæ Episcopus. In consequence of the Revolution, and after the death of bishop Rose, of Edinburgh, the Scottish bishops resumed the old form, one of them being elected Primus, with the power of convocating and presiding according to their canons.

1704. *Alexr. Rose, bp. of Edinburgh.
1720. *Jno. Fullarton, bp. of Edinburgh.
1727. *Arthur Millar, bp. of Edinburgh.

On his death the bishoprics of Dunkeld and Dunblane were united. See "Dunkeld and Dunblane," infra.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF DUNKELD AND DUNBLANE.

See "Dunkeld," and "Dunblane," supra.

1776. Chas. Rose, bp. of Dunblane, became also bp. of Dunkeld; d. Apr. 1791.

1792. Jonathan Watson, presbyter at Laurence Kirk; consec. Sept. 20; d. 1808.

1808. Patrick Torry, presbyter at Peterhead; consec. Oct. 12; made bp. of Fife 1837, and thenceforward styled bp. of Fife, Dunkeld, and Dunblane.

See "Fife, Dunkeld, and Dunblane," post, p. 543.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF EDINBURGH.

Passing over bishop Alexander Rose, whose name is found in the preceding lists of ante-Revolution bishops, and who connects the established Episcopal Church of Scotland with that form of it which is now only voluntary, the first of the post-Revolution bishops, properly so described, chosen to superintend the clergy of Edinburgh, was 1720. John Fullarton, form. min. of Paisley; consec. Jan. 25, 1705; app. to Edinburgh in 1720, on the death bp. of Alexr. Rose.

1727. Arthur Millar, min. of Inveresk; consec. Oct. 22, 1718; app. to Edinburgh; primus in 1727; d. same year.

Andrew Lumsden, min. of Duddington; consec. Nov. 22, and at once made primus.

1733. David Freebairn, min. of Dunning; consec. Oct. 17, 1722; primus in 1731; app. to Edinburgh 1733: d. 1739.

From 1739 to 1776 there was no appointment of a bishop of Edinburgh.

1776. Wm. Falconar; tr. from Moray; primus 1761–2; d. 1784.

Arth. Petrie was his coadj. in 1777.

1787. Wm. Abernethy Drummond; tr. from Brechin; res. 1805.

1806. Daniel, or David, Sandford, elect. in Jan. and consec. Feb. 9 this year; d. 1830.

1830. Jas. Walker, consec. Mar. 7; primus in 1837; d. Mar. 1841.
1841. Chas. Hughes Terrot.
1863. Thos. Baker Morrell, coadj.
1872. Hy. Cotterill.
1886. John Dowden.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF FIFE.

1733. Robt. Keith; tr. from Caithness; primus in 1743; d. Jan. 1757.
1743. Robt. White; tr. from Dunblane; primus in 1757; d. 1761.
1761. Hy. Edgar, consec. in 1759; coadj. to bp. White, whom he succeeded: there is no record of his death.

Fife was united to Edinburgh from bp. Edgar's death, until 1837, when it was transferred to Dunkeld and Dunblane. This bishopric has been styled St. Andrew's. since Sept. 1844.

See "Edinburgh," ante, p. 542, "Fife, Dunkeld, and Dunblane," infra, and "St. Andrew's, Dunkeld, and Dunblane," post, p. 545.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF FIFE, DUNKELD, AND DUNBLANE.

See "Fife," supra, and "Dunkeld and Dunblane," ante, p. 542.

1837. Patrick Torry, bp. of Dunkeld and Dunblane, was this year made bp. of Fife also. In Sept. 1844 the title of Fife was changed to St. Andrew's, and bp. Torry was thenceforward styled bp. of St. Andrew's, Dunkeld, and Dunblane.

See "St. Andrew's, Dunkeld, and Dunblane," post, p. 545.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF GALLOWAY.

It is doubtful whether there was a bishop of this see until it was united with Glasgow in 1848; but David Freebairn, who was consec. Oct. 17, 1722, is, by some, given as bp. of Galloway in 1731.

See "Glasgow and Galloway," post, p. 544.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF GLASGOW.

It is doubtful whether any named before 1837 were more than titular bishops, but the following are given by some authorities:—

172-. Alexr. Duncan, consec. 1724; (? bp. in 1721, and d. 1733), 1724. Robt. Norrie, consec. this year.
1726. Jas. Rose, consec. this year.
1727. David Rankine, consec. this year.
1732 (? 1722). Andrew, or David, Cant, consec. Oct. 17.
1837. In this year a mandate was issued to the dean and clergy to elect a bishop, and accordingly, on Oct. 8, Michl. Russell was consec. and app. He d. 1848, and his successor was consec. as bp. of Glasgow and Galloway.

See "Glasgow and Galloway," post, p. 544.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF GLASGOW AND GALLOWAY.

See “Glasgow” and “Galloway,” ante, p. 543.

1848. Walter Jno. Trower; consec. Sept. as bp. of Glasgow and Galloway.
1859. Wm. Scot Wilson.
1888. Wm. Thos. Harrison.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF THE ISLES.

See “Argyll and the Isles,” ante, p. 541.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF MORAY.

1727. Wm. Dunbar, min. at Cruden; consec. June 18; tr. to Aberdeen 1733.
1742. Wm. Falconar; tr. from Caithness; tr. to Edinburgh.
1776. Arthur Petrie, presbyter at Micklefolla, in Fyvie; consec. June 27; d. 1787.
1787. Andr. Macfarlane, presbyter in Inverness; consec. Mar. 7.
Hitherto the diocese of Ross had since the Revolution been under the charge of the bps. of Moray, but in 1796. Alexr. Jolly, presbyter at Frazerburgh, was consec. June 24, and app. coadj. to bp. Macfarlane, who immediately afterwards res. the charge of Moray to him, retaining that of Ross, with the title of bp. of that diocese. See “Ross,” post, p. 545.
1838. On the death of bp. Jolly in this year, Moray was again united to Ross under bp. Low, conformably with a decree of an episcopal synod held in Edinburgh in 1837.

See “Ross,” post, p. 545, and “Moray and Ross,” infra.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF MORAY AND ROSS.

See “Moray,” supra, and “Ross,” post, p. 545.

1838. Conformably to a decree of an episcopal synod held in Edinburgh in 1837, the bishoprics of Moray and Ross were united under David Low, then bp. of Moray, who was thenceforward styled bp. of Moray and Ross, and who res. 1851.
1851. Robt. Eden, who, in 1864, was styled bp. of Moray, Ross, and Caithness.

See “Moray, Ross, and Caithness,” infra.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF MORAY, ROSS, AND CAITHNESS.

See “Moray and Ross,” supra, and “Ross and Caithness,” post, p. 545.

1864. Robt. Eden, above named.
1886. Jas. Butler Kelly, consec. 1867.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF ORKNEY.

It is doubtful whether there were any post-Revolution bishops of this see until it was united to Aberdeen in 1864. The following names are given by some, but, as will be seen, they had other preferment from which they took their titles.

1703. Robt. Keith, consec. June 18, 1727; also bp. of Caithness.

1741. Wm. Falconar, consec. Sept. 10; also bp. of Caithness.

1762. Robt. Forbes, consec. June 21; also bp. of Ross and Caithness.

1787–8. Andr. Macfarlane, consec. Mar. 7, 1787; also bp. of Moray.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF ROSS.

It is not clear by whom the duties of some of the remoter districts of Scotland were performed about the middle of the last century. Ross appears to have been usually united with Moray, until bp. Macfarlane, in 1796, res. Moray to bp. Jolly, and retained, together with Ross, the superintendence of Argyll.

1796. Andr. Macfarlane, previously consec. bp. of Moray; d. 1819. See "Moray," ante p. 544.

1819. David Low, presbyter of Pittenween; consec. Nov. 14.

See "Moray and Ross," ante, p. 544.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF ROSS AND CAITHNESS.

1762. Robt. Forbes, consec. June 24.

See "Moray, Ross, and Caithness," ante, p. 544.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS OF ST. ANDREW'S, DUNKELD, AND DUNBLANE.

See "Fife Dunkeld, and Dunblane," ante, p. 543.

1844. St. Andrews was anciently the principal archiepiscopal see of Scotland, but the title was dropped at the Revolution, and was not revived until Sept. 5 of this year, when it was substituted for that of Fife by Patrick Torry, until then styled bp. of Fife, Dunkeld, and Dunblane, but thenceforward styled bp. of St. Andrews, Dunkeld and Dunblane; d. 1853.

1853. Chas. Wordsworth.

SCOTCH POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS WITHOUT SEES.

1705. John Sage, consec. Jan 25.
John Fullarton, consec. Jan. 25.
1709. John Falconer, consec. Jan. 25.
Hy. Christie, consec. Apr. 28.
1711. Hon. Archd. Campbell, consec. Aug. 24.
1718. Wm. Irvine, consec. Oct. 22.
1722. Andr. Cant, consec. Oct. 17; (? David Cant, bp. Glasgow, 1732.
1726. Jas. Rose, consec. Nov. 29 (? bp. of Glasgow).
1727. John Gillan, consec. June 11.
David Rankin, consec. June 11. (? bp. of Glasgow)

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE KIRK OF SCOTLAND.

THE government of the established Presbyterian Kirk of Scotland is superintended by a supreme court, called the General Assembly, consisting of commissioners from each presbytery, royal burgh, and university in the kingdom, with a proportion of Kirk elders, nearly as three to four. Meetings of this court take place annually, under the presidency of a Lord High Commissioner, as the representative of the crown, and of a moderator chosen by the members present.

LORD HIGH COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED TO REPRESENT THE SOVEREIGN IN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLIES OF THE KIRK OF SCOTLAND.

PART X. IRELAND.

SOVEREIGNS OF IRELAND.

For the sovereigns of Ireland prior to 1172 see Part I. "Royal," ante, p. 20. The subsequent sovereigns will be found under those of England, ante, p. 4.

OFFICERS OF STATE, &c., OF IRELAND.

LORD-LIEUTENANTS AND CHIEF GOVERNORS OF IRELAND.

When the English established themselves in Ireland, in the reign of Henry II., the Government of the country was constituted much upon the model of that of England. The executive government was vested in officers who in the early ages of the English power in Ireland were variously denominated; as Custos or Keeper, Warden, Justiciary, Procurator, Seneschal, Constable, Lord-Lieutenant, and Lord Deputy, the last deriving his power sometimes from the superior Governor and sometimes from the crown; for many years the title has been Lord-Lieutenant. During his absence his powers are delegated to two, three, or sometimes four Officers of State, styled "Lords Justices." Formerly these officers frequently administered the government for considerable periods, and their names are therefore included in these lists. Since the union of Great Britain and Ireland, in 1801, the absence of the Lord-Lieutenant has been but temporary, generally for a few days only, and it has therefore not been necessary to notice the appointment of Lords Justices since that time. They were generally three—(1) the Lord Chancellor, (2) the commander of the Forces, and (3) until the disestablishment of the Irish Church on Jan. 1, 1871, the Archbishop of Armagh.

Lord-Lieutenants and Chief Governors of Ireland.

L. L. Lord Lieutenant; L. J. Lord Justice; L. D. Lord Deputy; L. W. Lord Warden; Cust. Custos, Proc. Procurator; Sen. Seneschal; L. Const. Lord Constable; all governors under those names.

* Thomas de Lancaster is by some authors styled Duke of Lancaster, but erroneously, for Henry IV. had no son who bore that title. Thomas of Lancaster, here mentioned, was Henry's second son by Queen Mary de Bohun, and was afterwards (July 9, 1411) created earl of Albemarle and duke of Clarence; slain 1421. The late Mr. Lascelles, in his Liber Hiberniæ, correctly states that his patent as "lord of Ireland" is of record at Westminster.

JUDGES AND OTHER LEGAL DIGNITARIES OF IRELAND.

The earlier portions of these lists have been compiled from the Liber Munerum Publicorum Hiberniæ, a work in two immense volumes, imperial folio, which was completed by the late Mr. Rowley Lascelles, from the compilations of Mr. Lodge, formerly Deputy Keeper of the Rolls and Keeper of the State Papers in Ireland, and printed by order of the House of Commons. It has never been published. A few copies only were issued to high personages in the state, and to certain public offices, as records. A copy is in the British Museum, and may be seen there. There is no index to the book, but a separate index has been prepared and embodied in the 9th Report of the Record Office, Ireland (1877). Smyth's Chronicle of Irish Law Officers, a very useful little work, published in 1839, has also been consulted.

The Irish Law Courts were modelled on those of England, the origin of which is shortly given at pp. 345-352, ante.

The embarrassed condition of many of the Irish landowners led to the establishment first of an Incumbered Estates Court and afterwards of a Landed Estates Court.

The Irish Supreme Court of Judicature is formed by a consolidation of the old Irish Courts of Chancery, Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, Exchequer, Probate, and Matrimonial Causes, and the Landed Estates Court, with a provision for the inclusion of the Court of Admiralty on the next vacancy in the judgeship thereof. It was established by the Supreme Court of Judicature (Ireland) Act, 1877, (40 & 41 Vict. c. 57), whereby a "Supreme Court of Judicature in Ireland" was established, to consist of two permanent divisions.

1. Her Majesty's High Court of Justice in Ireland.
2. Her Majesty's Court of Appeal in Ireland.

1. HER MAJESTYS HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE IN IRELAND.

President, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland for the time being; in his absence the L.C.J. of Ireland for the time being.

This Court originally consisted of five divisions:—

1. The Chancery Division, consisting of the Lord Chancellor (President), the Master of the Rolls, the Vice Chancellor, and the Judges of the Landed Estates Court, who were to be called the Land Judges of the Chancery Division.
2. The Queen's Bench Division, consisting of the L.C.J. of Ireland (President), and the other Judges of the old Court of Queen's Bench, in all four Judges.
3. The Common Pleas Division, consisting of the L.C.J. of the Common Pleas (President) and the other Judges of the old Court of Common Pleas, in all three judges.
4. The Exchequer Division, consisting of the L.C.B. of the Exchequer (President) and the other Judges of the old Court of Exchequer, in all (after the next vacancy) three Judges.
5. The Probate and Matrimonial Division, consisting of the Judge of the Courts of Probate and for Matrimonial Causes. Upon the Admiralty jurisdiction falling into the Supreme Court it was to be exercised by the Judge of this division, which was thenceforward to be called the Probate, Matrimonial, and Admiralty Division.

The titles of Lord Chancellor, Lord Chief Justice of Ireland, Master of the Rolls, L.C J. of the Common Pleas, and L.C.B. of the Exchequer were to be retained, but all other future judges were to be styled "Judges of Her Majesty's High Court of Justice in Ireland."

By the Supreme Court of Judicature (Ireland) Act, 1887, (50 & 51 Vict. cap. 6), power was given on the next vacancies to abolish the offices of L.C.J. of the Common Pleas and L.C.B. of the Exchequer, to fill up the vacancies with ordinary puisne judges, and to "direct the amalgamation and fusion" of the Common Pleas and Exchequer Divisions with the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court. This power has been acted on as regards the Common Pleas Division, which by Order in Council (Ireland) dated July 6, 1887, was abolished as from Oct. 20, 1887.

II. HER MAJESTY'S COURT OF APPEAL IN IRELAND.

This Court originally consisted of:—

1. Five ex officio Judges, viz., the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the L.C.J. of Ireland, the Master of the Rolls, the L.C.J. of the Common Pleas, and the L.C.B. of the Exchequer, but under the Supreme Court of Judicature (Ireland) Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict., cap. 6), power was given to abolish the last two offices; vide supra.
2. Two ordinary Judges to be from time to time appointed. The first ordinary Judges were to be the existing Lord Justice of Appeal, and one other to be appointed either before or after the commencement of the Act.

3. Power was given to appoint as additional Judges any retired Lord Chancellor, Lord Chief Justice, Master of the Rolls, or Lord Chief Baron willing to serve.

The ordinary and additional Judges are styled "Lords Justices of Appeal."

The new system came into operation on Jan. 1, 1878.

LORD CHANCELLORS, &c., OF IRELAND.

The abbreviations signify, V. C. Vice Chancellor; D. C. Deputy Chancellor; L. K. Lord Keeper; D. L. K. Deputy Lord Keeper; where no abbreviations appear, the person named is Lord Chancellor.

SERJEANTS-AT-LAW—IRELAND.

In Ireland, as in England, the office of serjeant-at-law is one of very great antiquity, but in Ireland the title was conferred upon a much more limited number. Down to 1627 only one person held the dignity of serjeant, and from the patents quoted in "Smyth's Chronicle" (ante, p. 572) he seems to have beenstyled the king's serjeant. In 1627, a second serjeant was appointed, and the senior serjeant was then styled the prime serjeant. In 1682 a third serjeant was appointed. In 1805, on the death of Arthur Browne, the then prime serjeant, the title was altered to first serjeant.

The serjeants, or at all events the prime and second serjeants, formerly ranked before the attorney and solicitor general, but from 1805 this precedence has been abolished.

ARCHBISHOPS, BISHOPS, AND DEANS OF IRELAND.

The number of Irish archbishops and bishops has been gradually reduced by the union of dioceses, chiefly under the provisions of 3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 37 (Aug. 14, 1833). The various changes will be found noted in the lists. In the result, Ireland is now, for ecclesiastical purposes, divided into two provinces, Armagh and Dublin. Armagh comprises the dioceses of—

Armagh and Clogher.
Meath.
Derry and Raphoe.
Down, Connor, and Dromore.
Kilmore, Elphin, and Ardagh.
Tuam, Killala, and Achonry.

and Dublin the dioceses of—

Dublin, Glendalough, and Kildare.
Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin.
Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore.
Cork, Cloyne, and Ross.
Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh.
Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe.

The churches of England and Ireland were united on Jan. 1, 1801, on the union of Great Britain and Ireland under 39 & 40 Geo. III. cap. 67, but on Jan. 1, 1871, under 32 & 33 Vict. cap. 42, the Irish Church was disestablished and became a voluntary institution. Since that date the affairs of the Irish Church have been managed by a "Representative Church Body" incorporated under the disestablishing statute.

A great deal of valuable information on the subject of the Irish Protestant Church, and the bishops and deans thereof, will be found in Cotton's Fasti, of which use has been made in completing the following lists.

PROVINCE OF ARMAGH.

DIOCESES OF ARMAGH AND CLOGHER.

St. Patrick, the Apostle of Ireland, built a church, and fixed a bishop's see, at Armagh, in the year 444 or 445. The bishops were not invested with the pallium until March 9, 1152, when it was conferred at the hands of the cardinal-priest, John Paparo, legate from pope Eugene III., on the sees of Dublin, Cashel, and Tuam. About the same time, the dignity of "Primate of all Ireland" was recognised as belonging to the Archbishops of Armagh, of whom Gelasius was the first.

Clogher was founded by St. Macartin, who was one of the earliest disciples of St. Patrick. He fixed the see at Clogher, where he also built a monastery.

On the death of Bishop Tottenham, in 1850, Armagh and Clogher were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 37.

---

* The family name of this bishop is lost; for those he is here called by are assumed names, according to a custom often practised among ecclesiastics, to express their devotion to Christ, or some saint. Mœlisa means "the servant of Christ"; and Mac-Mail-Ciaran, "the son of the servant of St. Kiaran."

DEANS OF LOUTH.

* * Donell, dean of Louth; d. 1065.
* * O'Robhartaigh, dean of Louth; d. 1081.

At a period now unknown, but supposed to be in the eleventh century, the bishopric of Louth was united to that of Clogher.

DIOCESE OF MEATH, INCLUDING CLONARD AND CLONMACNOIS.

There were formerly many episcopal sees in Meath, as Clonard, Duleek, Kells, Trim, Ardbraccan, Dunshaughlin, and Slane, besides others of less note. All of these, with the exception of Duleek and Kells, were consolidated, and their common see fixed at Clonard, before the year 1152; at which time the divisions of the bishoprics in Ireland was made by Cardinal Paparo. Subsequently Duleek and Kells were merged into the general see.

The see of Clonard was founded by St. Finian about 520. Bishop Eugene, who succeeded in 1174, changed the name of the see to Meath, but the see remained at Clonard until about 1206, when bishop Rochfort, of Meath, changed it to Newtown, near Trim, and made the abbey church of St. Peter and St. Paul, which he had just founded for Augustine canons, the cathedral. At the Reformation, King Henry VIII. converted the church of St. Mary's abbey at Ballymore, near Loch Seudy, in Westmeath, into a cathedral for this see; but how long it continued so is uncertain.

Clonmacnois was founded by St. Keiran or Kiaran about 549. In 1568, on the death of bishop Wall, the see was united to Meath, and that title was alone preserved by the succeeding bishops. The deans of the united sees still take their title from Clonmacnois.

DIOCESE OF DERRY AND RAPHOE.

THE see of DERRY, when first founded, was placed at Ardsrath, whence it was translated, about 597, to Maghera, and in 1158 to Derry, when Flathbert O'Brolcan, abbot of Derry, was made bishop of it. Flathbert built the cathedral in 1164; and the edifice becoming ruinous, it was rebuilt by the colony of Londoners who settled here in the reign of James I.

It is difficult to determine the time when the see of RAPHOE was founded. St. Columb-Cile founded a monastery here, which was afterwards enlarged and repaired by other holy men; but it is the general opinion, that St. Eunan erected the church into a cathedral, and was the first bishop of the see. History is very defective in the account of his successors, until the arrival of the English.

On the death of bishop Bissett, in 1834, DERRY and RAPHOE were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 37.

DIOCESES OF DOWN, CONNOR, AND DROMORE.

THE SEE OF DOWN is said to have been founded by St. Carlan, about 499, but lists of its bishops generally commence with Malachy O'Morgair, who succeeded in 1137. The prior bishops are sometimes styled bishops of Dundalethglass, but this see is generally included in that of Connor.

The first Bishop of CONNOR was Ængus Macnisius, or St. Macnise, who died about 507. The ancient name of this see was Dailnaraigh.

The see of DROMORE was founded by St. Colman about 556.

DOWN AND CONNOR appear to have been always intimately connected. It is probable that prior to the appointment of bishop Malachy O'Morgair in 1137 they were united, or, rather, that Down was included in Connor. In 1442 the two sees were permanently united.

On the death of bishop Saurin, in 1842, DOWN, CONNOR, AND DROMORE were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 37.

DIOCESES OF KILMORE, ELPHIN, AND ARDAGH.

Kilmore signifies a great church. The bishops of Kilmore borrowed their title from a territory called Brefiny or Brefne: they were sometimes called Brefinienses, and sometimes Triburnenses (bishops of Triburna); because they are said to have had their residence near a village of that name; but in 1454, Andrew Mac Brady, bishop of Triburna, erected the parish church of St. Fedlemid or Felimy, which he found to be in a more commodious situation, into a cathedral.

St. Patrick founded a cathedral at Elphin about the middle of the fifth century, and placed over it St. Asicus, a monk, whom he consecrated bishop. After some centuries, and a little before the arrival of the English, Elphin was enriched with many large estates, on its union with the see of Roscommon; and the sees of Ardcarn, Drumclive, and others of less note, were also annexed to it. By these unions, the see of Elphin became one of the richest in Ireland.

Ardagh is among the most ancient sees in Ireland, having been founded by St. Patrick, who made his nephew the first bishop. In 1742, Ardagh was joined to or held in commendam with Tuam until that archdiocese was reduced to a bishopric, on the death of Archbishop Trench, in 1839.

Ardagh was held in commendam by the bishops of Kilmore during the first half of the seventeenth century, and the two sees were united in 1661. On the deprivation of bishop Sheridan, in 1691, they were separated for a short time, but were again re-united under bishop Smith, in 1693. They were again separated in 1742, and Ardagh was then united to or held in commendam with Tuam.

On the death of bishop Trench, of Tuam, in 1839, Kilmore and Ardagh were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 37, and on the death of bishop Beresford, in 1841, Kilmore, Elphin, and Ardagh were united under the same Statute.

DIOCESES OF TUAM (INCLUDING ENACHDUNE AND MAYO), KILLALA, AND ACHONRY.

St. Jarlath, the son of Loga, is looked upon as the founder of the cathedral of Tuam, about the beginning of the sixth century. Tuam was anciently called Tuiam-da-Gualand, and the cathedral, dedicated to St. Jarlath, was known as Tempull Jarleith or St. Jarlath's Church, having been dedicated to its founder. By means of assistance from Turlough O'Connor, the then king of Ireland, it was rebuilt, in 1152, by Edan O'Hoisin, first archbishop of Tuam, or at least the first who had the pallium, but several of his predecessors are sometimes called archbishops by the Irish historians.

The see of Enachdune has long been united to Tuam, and the title has ceased. The sees of Ardagh and Kilfenora have also at various times been held in commendam with Tuam. Particulars will be found under those dioceses. On the death of archbishop Trench, in 1839, Tuam was reduced to a bishopric.

St. Gerald, a native of England, and a disciple of St. Colman, bishop of Lindisfarne, followed that saint upon his expulsion out of England, in company with many persons of the same nation. St. Colman founded a monastery about the year 665 or 670, at Mayo, and placed in it the Englishmen who had followed him; whence it took the name of Mayo-na-Sasson, or Mayo of the Saxons, by which name the natives called the natives of England. St. Gerald enlarged this monastery, and erected it into an episcopal see, of which he was the first bishop. He died on the 13th of March, about the year 697.

St. Muredach, the first bishop of Killala, was consecrated by St. Patrick; whence it is manifest that he flourished in the fifth century; but the time of his death is uncertain. The date of the foundation of the see is pretty nearly to be guessed at; for St. Patrick made his journey into Connaught about 440–1. Few traces remain of the successors of Muredach, before the arrival of the English. The names of two only occur in history.

St. Finian, bishop of Clonard, founded the church of Achad, latterly commonly called Achonry and Achad-Conair, and anciently Achad-Chavin, about the year 530. St. Finian, having built this church, immediately gave it to his disciple Nathy, called in Irish Dathi, i.e. David, who went by two names; for he was commonly called Comrah or Cruimthir, and was a man of great sanctity. The latter of these names signifies, in old Irish, a priest; the other has a religious meaning. His festival is celebrated on the 9th of August, and the church was dedicated to him. In the ancient annals of Ireland, the prelates of this see are, for the most part, called bishops of Luigny or Liny, from the barony or subdivision of the county in which it is situated. No account is to be had of the successors of St. Nathy, until the arrival of the English in Ireland.

MAYO was united to or merged in TUAM about 1559, and the name was no longer preserved.

ACHONRY was held in commendam with KILLALA from 1607, and on the death of bishop Verschoyle, in 1834, TUAM, KILLALA, and ACHONRY were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 37.

PROVINCE OF DUBLIN.

See p. 594.

DIOCESES OF DUBLIN, GLENDALOUGH, AND KILDARE.

The See of Dublin is supposed to have been founded by St. Patrick, about the year 448. It became archiepiscopal in 1152. See Armagh, ante, p. 594. There are two cathedrals, both situated in the city of Dublin; one is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and is called Christ Church; the other is dedicated to St. Patrick. The Archbishop is primate of Ireland.

Glendalough or Glandalagh has been united to Dublin since the year 1214. The catalogue of its bishops is extremely incorrect; and it has been so long united to the archiepiscopal see of Dublin that their names are seldom to be met with in history. St. Kevin seems to have been the founder of the see. There existed both a cathedral and an abbey; the first was dedicated to the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, and both were situated in a small valley surrounded by lofty mountains. The place is now commonly known by the name of the "Seven Churches," from the remains of so many buildings which are contiguous to the cathedral.

Kildare is one of the earliest episcopal foundations in Ireland. It was founded, probably, at the close of the fifth century, as the first bishop on record died in the year 519. St. Bridget, the illegitimate daughter of an Irish chieftain, born in the year 453, received the veil while in her fourteenth year, from the hands of St. Patrick, and prior to 484 she founded a nunnery here. To this saint, who died in 523, the cathedral was dedicated.

Glendalough was united to Dublin in 1214. On the death of Bishop Lindsay, in 1846, Dublin, Glendalough, and Kildare were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 37.

1297. Wm. de Hotham, dean of St. Patrick's.
He died the same year, and Adam de Balsham, prior of Christ-Church, was elected by that convent; but the dean and chapter of St. Patrick's made choice of their dean, the before-mentioned Thos. de Chadsworth. This occasioned much trouble; for the pope, claiming a right to name to the see, it not having been filled within three months after the death of the last bishop, named

DIOCESES OF OSSORY, FERNS, AND LEIGHLIN.

The see of Ossory was first planted at Saiger, in the territory of Ely O'Carrol, about the year 402, thirty years, it is said, before the arrival of St. Patrick. It was removed to Aghavoe, it is supposed, in 1052. Felix O'Dullany, bishop of Ossory, translated the see to Kilkenny about the close of Henry II.'s reign.

Ferns took its name from the "hero Ferna, son of Caril, king of the Decies, who was slain in battle at this place by Gallus, the son of Morna." The see was anciently archiepiscopal for a time; for in the early ages of Christianity, the title of Archbishop in Ireland, except in the case of Armagh, was not fixed to any particular see, but sometimes belonged to one, and sometimes to another city, according to the sanctity and merits of the presiding bishop; and he was not denominated from his see, but from the province in which his bishopric was situated.

Leighlin, commonly called Old Leighlin, is situated about a mile and a half to the westward of the river Barrow. Here St. Laserian constituted an episcopal see about the year 628.

Ferns and Leighlin were united in 1600, and on the death of bishop Elrington, in 1835, Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 37.

BISHOPS OF OSSORY.

In the ancient writings the name abbot is frequently used instead of bishop; so that the abbots of Saiger may have been bishops likewise.

DIOCESES OF CASHEL, EMLY, WATERFORD, AND LISMORE.

Cormac, king and bishop of Cashel, is reputed to have been the founder or the restorer of the cathedral of Cashel, and we have few traces of the bishops before his time. Cashel became archiepiscopal in 1152, but under 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 37, was reduced to a bishopric on the death of Archbishop Laurence in 1839.

Emly is a very ancient see, and is supposed to have been founded by St. Patrick. The place is mentioned by some of the old historians as a large and flourishing city, but it is now a poor and inconsiderable village. The cathedral is dedicated to St. Ailbe, who is named as the first bishop, and who died September 12, 527.

The cathedral of Waterford, dedicated to the Blessed Trinity, was first built by the Ostmen, and by Malchus, the first bishop, after his return from England from his consecration, about 1096.

Lismore was founded by St. Carthage about 636, and Cormac, the son of Muretus, king of Munster, repaired it before 1130.

There was a see at Ardmore, founded by St. Declan, in the infancy of the Irish Church, but it was united to Lismore, soon after the arrival of the English.

Emly was united to Cashel in 1568, and Lismore was united to Waterford in 1358 or 1363. On the death of Bishop Bourke in 1832, Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 37.

DIOCESES OF CORK, CLOYNE, AND ROSS.

There is little to be found in ancient writers concerning the foundation of the cathedral of Cork, but it is generally ascribed to St. Barr or Finbarr, in the seventh century. Through length of time the church became quite ruinous, but some years ago it was completely rebuilt, and is now a handsome structure.

Ross was, most likely, founded by St. Fachnan, who flourished in the beginning of the sixth century, and "who lived in a monastery of his own erection." He was called Fachnan Mongach, or the "Hairy," having been born with hair; and was abbot of a monastery in the island of Molanfid, near the town of Youghal, formerly called Dar-Inis. There a city grew up, in which was a large seminary for scholars, called Ross-Ailithri. When the cathedral was founded, or who was the first bishop of it, it is impossible to ascertain. It seems probable, however, that Fachnan was the first bishop. There are no records of this see until after the arrival of the English.

Cloyne was founded in the sixth century by St. Colman, the son of Linin, who was himself the first bishop of it. Who his immediate successors in the see were, it is difficult, if not impossible, to ascertain; nor can anything be said, with certainty, of the bishops, until after the arrival of the English.

Cork and Cloyne were united by Pope Martin V. about 1430. Ross was added in 1583, and the bishops were styled "Cork, Cloyne, and Ross" as at present. In 1638 a separate bishop was appointed to Cloyne; but after the Restoration the three sees were again united, and so continued until 1678, when Cloyne once more had a separate bishop, Cork and Ross still remaining united.

On the death of bishop Brinkley in 1835, Cork, Cloyne, and Ross were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 37.

DIOCESES OF KILLALOE, KILFENORA, CLONFERT, AND KILMACDUAGH.

The see of Killaloe is supposed to have been founded by St. Molua, abbot, whose disciple, St. Flannan (son of king Theodoric) was consecrated at Rome by pope John IV. about 640, and was first bishop. About the end of the twelfth century, the ancient see of Roscrea was united to Killaloe. Of Roscrea, St. Cronan, who flourished about 620, was bishop, or, as some say, abbot, and the founder of the church.

There is no certainty concerning the foundation of the see of Kilfenora. Some writers think that St. Fachnan, to whom the church was dedicated, was the founder and first bishop. In the ancient distribution of the bishoprics of Ireland, made by cardinal Paparo, it was suffragan to the archbishopric of Cashel; but when at the Restoration of Charles II. it was annexed to or held with Tuam, it became suffragan to that see.

St. Brendan, the son of Finloga, contemporary with St. Brendan of Birr, and his fellow student, founded an abbey at Clonfert in 558, and was himself abbot. He died in May 577, at Enaghdune, whence his body was conveyed to Clonfert, and there interred. In his time the cathedral of Clonfert was founded. Colgan makes St. Brendan the founder and first bishop of Clonfert, and says that he abdicated, and placed St. Moena in his room. Others again make St. Moena the first bishop. In the Ulster Annals, under the year 571 or 572, the death of the first bishop of this see is thus mentioned: "Moena, Bishop of Clonfert-Brenain, went to rest." Brendan's true name was Nennius or Nennio; but it is common with the Irish to add the monosyllable mo, signifying mine, to the proper names of their saints, out of respect and tenderness.

The church of Kilmacduagh was founded by Colman, the son of Duagh, who was descended from a noble family at Connaught, and very nearly related to Guair, king of that country. To distinguish him from other Colmans, his contemporaries, he was usually called after his father, Macduagh, or the son of Duagh. He was very fond of an ascetic life, and is said to have lived in a wilderness in the southern parts of Connaught seven years with only one companion. From this life of retirement he was, in the end, made bishop, and fixed his see in a place which, from his surname, was called Kilmacduagh, or the "Church of the son of Duagh."

Kilfenora was held with Limerick from 1642 to 1649, with Tuam from 1660 to 1741, and with Clonfert and Kilmacduagh from 1741 to 1752. Killaloe and Kilfenora were united in 1752. Clonfert and Kilmacduagh were united in 1602. On the translation of bishop Knox to Limerick in 1834, Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh were united under 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 37.

DIOCESES OF LIMERICK, ARDFERT, AND AGHADOE.

Donald O'Brien, king of Limerick, founded and endowed the cathedral of Limerick about the period of the arrival of the English in Ireland. The more ancient see of Inis-Scattery was united to Limerick about the beginning of the thirteenth century; but, according to Usher, its possessions were divided among the sees of Limerick, Killaloe, and Ardfert. Inis-Scattery is said to have been founded by St. Patrick, and to have been governed by him for some time.

The see of Ardfert was formerly called the bishopric of Kerry; its cathedral was dedicated to St. Brandon. The cathedral of Aghadoe, dedicated to St. Finian, is situated within two miles of the town of Killarney.

Ardfert and Aghadoe have been united from the earliest times, and they were both united to Limerick in 1667.

LORD MAYORS AND RECORDERS OF DUBLIN.

The Corporation of Dublin originally consisted of the Lord Mayor, 2 sheriffs, 24 aldermen, 124 common councilmen, 28 sheriff-men or sheriffs-peers, and 96 representatives of the 25 civic guilds. It was re-constituted under 3 & 4 Vict., cap. 108 (1840), and now consists of the Lord Mayor, who is chosen from among the aldermen or town councillors, 15 aldermen and 45 town councillors.

The chief magistrate of Dublin had conferred upon him the distinction of "Lord" Mayor by Charles I. in 1641; but the first mayor that enjoyed the title was Sir Daniel Bellingham, in 1665.

PART XI. INDIA.

It is impossible within the limits of the present work to give any account of the origin and history of the present British Indian Empire, or even to refer to the numerous acts of parliament, charters, and orders in council relating thereto. The first English East India Company was incorporated by Elizabeth in 1600. Charles I. granted another charter to a new company; but after numerous disputes between the two companies they were united by Oliver Cromwell. In 1698 a rival company was again established, again the two were united in 1702, and finally in 1708 a new East India Company was established under a charter granted by Anne. This charter was modified from time to time, but the company continued until, under 21 & 22 Vict., cap. 106, the Government of India was transferred to the Crown. This act came into operation September 1, 1858, but was not proclaimed in India until November 1, following.

In the year 1784, under 24 Geo. III., cap. 25, the East India Company was placed under a Board of Control (see part III., ante, p. 251). This was abolished by 21 & 22 Vict., cap. 106, above mentioned, and a Secretary of State for India appointed (see part III., ante, p. 236). A council, composed principally of retired Indian officials, was at the same time appointed to advise and assist the Secretary of State; but he has power to act independently if he thinks fit. Under 39 & 40 Vict., cap. 10, and a proclamation dated and gazetted April 28, 1876, the Queen assumed the title of Empress of India. This title was proclaimed in India January 1, 1877.

British India was originally divided into three provinces or presidencies—

Bengal, or Fort William;
Madras, or Fort St. George;
Bombay;

but after various sub-divisions and acquisition of territory it now consists of eight provinces—

Bengal,
North-West Provinces and Oudh,
Punjab,
Central Provinces,
Burma,
Assam,
Madras,
Bombay,

which are placed under a governor, a lieutenant governor, or a chief commissioner, according to their relative importance.

Prince of Wales Island or Penang, Malacca, and Singapore, which were formerly under the government of India, now form a separate colony under the title of the Straits Settlements. See "Straits Settlements," post, p. 674.

The supreme government of India is vested in a Governor General or Viceroy, whose seat of government is at Calcutta, the chief city of Bengal.

The whole of India is in the ecclesiastical province of CALCUTTA.

By 3 and 4 Wm. IV., cap. 85 (Aug. 28, 1833), it was declared that the supreme direction and control of the whole of the civil and military government of all the territories and revenues in India should be vested in a governor-general and council, to be styled the governor-general of India in council. And it was further declared that the person who should be governor-general of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal on Apr. 22, 1834, should be the first governor-general of India, under the act. The governor-general of Bengal, as head of the chief presidency, had been usually denominated "Governor-General"; Madras, Bombay, &c., being subject to his supreme control; but it was not until the passing of this act that the "Governor-General of India," actually so constituted, existed as well in name as in authority.

Ld. Wm. Cavendish Bentinck, vide supra.	Contd. in the govt., Apr. 22, 1834.	First Gov.-Gen. of India under the above act.	Mar. 20, 1835.

BENGAL.

THE PRESIDENCY OR PROVINCE OF BENGAL, sometimes styled the presidency of Fort William, from the small settlement out of which it has risen, is the youngest of the three presidencies, but has for many years been considered as the principal one, its governor having been, by the Regulation Act 1773 (13 Geo. III., cap. 63), made ex-officio governor-general of the whole of the dominions of the East India Company. By the 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 85 (Aug. 28, 1833), the title of "Governor-General of India" was first officially created, and provision was made for the division of Bengal into two provinces, to be called Fort William, in Bengal, and Agra, with a deputy or lieut. governor for each. By the 5 & 6 Wm. IV., cap. 52 (Aug. 31, 1835), the East India Company was empowered to suspend this division, and it was never made. By 16 & 17 Vict., cap. 95 (Aug. 20, 1853), and 17 & 18 Vict., cap. 77 (Aug. 7, 1854), further provision was made for the division of Bengal; and under these various Acts, to which the reader is referred for details, the North-West Provinces were separated, and a lieutenant governor was appointed for the rest of Bengal.
